Introduction

Standish Name Meaning: English: habitational name from a place in Lancashire (now part of Greater Manchester), so named from Old English stan 'stone' + edisc 'pasture'. There is another place so named in Gloucestershire, but it does not seem to be the source of the surname. [From Dictionary of American Family Names published by Oxford University Press]

Plymouth County in Massachusetts

Myles Standish, Myles also spelled Miles, (born c. 1584, Lancashire, Eng.—died Oct. 3, 1656, Duxbury, Mass.), British-American colonist and military leader of the Plymouth colony.

As a young man, Standish fought in the Netherlands, where he probably met the English religious exiles who later became known as the Pilgrims. He sailed with them to America on the "Mayflower" in 1620, serving as their military leader when they established Plymouth in New England. He learned the language of the local Indians and led several expeditions against hostile tribes. In 1627 he was a leader of the group in the colony that bought out the London investors. In 1628 Standish helped to break up the colony of Thomas Morton at nearby Merry Mount when it proved too unpuritanical to suit Plymouth. He also served as assistant governor and as treasurer of the Plymouth colony (1644–49). He moved to Duxbury in 1631 and remained there until his death.

There is no historical evidence for the story that he asked John Alden to propose marriage for him to Priscilla Mullins, as told in Longfellow's poem The Courtship of Miles Standish. [From Britannica.com]

Son of John Standish; married Rose Standish; married 2d, Barbara Standish, 1624; 6 children. Hired to accompany Pilgrims, sailed from London, Eng. on ship Mayflower, 1620; a mem. of small party that made 1st landing at Plymouth, Dec. 1620; supervised building of fort; learned Indian langs. and became Pilgrims intermediary with natives; chosen to return to Eng. on behalf of Pilgrims who claimed rights to land or property in New World, 1625-26; an undertaker who assumed debts of colony, 1627; atty. for Council for New Eng. to deliver their land to Pilgrims under new grant, 1630; treas. of colony for 6 years, asst. on Gov.'s Council for 29 years; founder (with John Alden) Duxbury (Mass.), 1631; no hist. basis for tale of John Alden's proposal to Priscilla on Standish's behalf. [From Marquis Biographies Online at AmericanAncestors.org]

In Lancashire, England, there stands a stately Standish Hall inherited by a family which has been there since the Norman Conquest. If we may accept the history preserved of their exploits, they were distinguished mainly as soldiers. Under Richard II, a John Standish was knighted for having stabbed the fallen Wat Tyler after the mayor had struck him from his horse. "Standwich" is the spelling in Froissart, where the story is told, and he is said to have been one of the king's squires, being created knight apparently on that very day, and being sent as one of three to parley with the rioters at Smithfield, near London. Sir Ralph Standish fought at Agincourt under Henry V in the wars against France. Sixty-seven years later Alexander Standish was knighted for bravery in Scotland. Still later, Ralph Standish married the daughter of the Duke of Norfolk, and lost his estate for rebellion against the Crown in supporting the Pretender. There were two branches of the Standish family, one living at Standish Hall, the other at Duxbury Hall. At the Reformation the two separated, the Standish Hall family remaining Romanists, while the Duxbury branch became Protestants. It is believed that Myles Standish, the great Puritan captain, belonged to the Protestant branch, since he named his home in America Duxbury. Yet in his will he says that he is a great-grandson of a younger brother from the house of Standish, and he bequeaths the title to these vast estates to his eldest son. The rent-roll of these lands is half a million yearly, and to defeat the claim of his line, it is supposed that the page containing the parish record of his birth was fraudulently defaced. [From Genealogical and Family History of the State of Maine Vol. 3 by George T. Little published 1909 "Standish" pg. 1212]

Little is known of Myles Standish's early life, other than that he probably came from Lancashire, England, and had fought the Spaniards in the Netherlands. Hired by the Leiden Pilgrims to manage the military defenses of the prospective colony, Standish was not a member of the Leiden congregation, although he quickly became a loyal supporter of the Pilgrim venture.

When he arrived in New England, Standish's first responsibility was to give practical assistance in the explorations for a permanent place for settlement. Standish participated in the venture that discovered corn (later used as seed to save the colony from starvation) and in the expedition that made initial contact with the Indians and later landed at the future site of the colony. Once the colony was begun, he turned his attention to building its defenses. He supervised construction of the town fort and directed the organization and training of the local militia.

Standish also commanded military expeditions sent out from Plymouth to aid allies or to suppress enemies. Once he led a party of Pilgrims to aid Squanto and a group of friendly Indians. Another time he helped an English village at Wessagussett (Weymouth) threatened by Indian attack. There Standish demonstrated his personal courage when, in a conference with the Indians, he had the doors to the building barred and then called for an assault on the potential enemy, personally killing the Indian leader.

Perhaps the most entertaining example of Standish's military leadership was his seriocomic capture of Thomas Morton of Merrimount in 1628. Morton's emphasis on riotous living, selling firearms to the Indians, and paying high prices for furs threatened the piety and profit of New Plymouth. Standish led the assault on Merrimount. In a maneuver similar to the one used against the Indians at Wessagussett, he barred the doors and made ready to battle Morton. Morton and his two associates were "soe steeled with drink," however, that they could not resist capture.

Standish was the colony's first agent to return to England, and he also served as envoy to other New England colonies. He was known for his aggressiveness and quick temper. But it was as the Pilgrims' military adviser and commander that he made his greatest contribution. He developed a strong defensive posture for New Plymouth and directed the colony's militia with an exceptional degree of personal heroism and dedicated leadership. He died in Duxbury, Mass., on Oct. 3, 1656. [From Encyclopedia.com website]

His parents were Isaac and Sophia Meacham. It is authentically stated that the mother of Isaac [Lucy Standish Meacham] was a granddaughter of the celebrated Myles Standish. By her second husband Mrs. Meacham had one child Levi E Meacham II, who was left to her sole care, as the father died when he was two months old. At the outbreak of the Civil War her two sons enlisted, Oscar Nicholas [from her prior marriage] and Levi E. Meachm II, the latter being only fifteen years of age, and she herself went to the front and served as a hospital nurse. Oscar served until disabled by wounds and Levi served until the end of the war. She went to the front in 1862 and served till the close of the war. Levi E. Meachm II was county clerk and state representative after the Civil War and lived in Cleveland until his death in 1920. Libby Prison was a Confederate prison at Richmond, Virginia, during the American Civil War. It gained an infamous reputation for the overcrowded and harsh conditions under which officer prisoners from the Union Army were kept. Prisoners suffered from disease, malnutrition and a high mortality rate. By 1863, one thousand prisoners were crowded into large open rooms on two floors, with open, barred windows leaving them exposed to weather and temperature extremes.

RETIRED PATROLMAN DIES – Fred Winchester, a retired patrolman, died last night at his home, 6601 Wakefield avenue. Death was due to heart trouble, ill health having forced his retirement from the force a few months ago after twenty-three years' service in the police department. Winchester served most of that period at the W. 29th street station. He aided in hunting down several notorious murderers and was prominent in the clearing up of the Fox and Blakesly murder on Church Avenue, nineteen years ago.

Winchester Acquitted.

Patrolman Fred Winchester was tried yesterday afternoon before Director Gibbons on a charge of misconducting himself in a house on Mulberry street, preferred by Edward Moran. He was also charged with arresting Moran without cause. Moran had an army of witnesses to testify that Winchester was in the house for an hour or more. The plaintiff claimed that he had not touched a drop of liquor that night, while Winchester and Officer Pierce swore that he was staggering. After all the testimony was in Director Gibbons acquitted Winchester.

- Married to: Charles (Ed) Edward Jowett (1878 – 1935) on October 4, 1902; They divorced in 1910 [From Findagrave.com]

  Charles E. Jowett, 57, a furniture salesman unemployed for the last five years, had a date with an undertaker last night. He kept it. Mr. Jowett and his wife were friends of Charles Mandley of 15480 Triskett Road, an undertaker. Mr. Mandley kept his funeral car in the garage of the Jowett home at 2185 Niagara Drive, Lakewood. Going out yesterday for the afternoon Mrs. Jowett reminded her husband of the bridge date they had that evening with the Mandleys. When Mrs. Jowett returned she couldn't find her husband. Her daughter, Virginia, 17, went in search of him. In the garage she saw a note tied to the door of the Mandley funeral car. "When you open the door," The note said, according to police, "be sure to hold your breath. This car is full of poisonous fumes. Please have Mandley take care of my body." Inside the car Miss Jowett found her father slimped dead, beside a garbage can lid on which he had placed a quantity of deadly chemicals the fumes from which killed him. Sam and wife Verna

- Born: November 18, 1886 in Cleveland, Ohio [From Ohio, Births and Christenings Index 1774-1973 at Ancestry.com]
- Occupation: Professional baseball catcher for the Indianapolis Indians [From 1910 US Census data] & Railroad Man for the CPRR [From World War I Draft Registration Card – 1917]

The Central Pacific Railroad (CPRR) is the former name of the railroad network built between California and Utah, US, that built eastwards from the West Coast in the 1860s, to complete the western part of the "First Transcontinental Railroad" in North America. It is now part of the Union Pacific Railroad.

Many 19th century national proposals to build a transcontinental railroad failed because of the energy consumed by political disputes over slavery. With the secession of the South, the modernizers in the Republican Party controlled the US Congress. They passed legislation authorizing the railroad, with financing in the form of government railroad bonds. These were all eventually repaid with interest. The government and the railroads both shared in the increased value of the land grants, which the railroads developed. The construction of the railroad also secured for the government the economical "safe and speedy transportation of the mails, troops, munitions of war, and public stores." [From Wikipedia.com]

The Indianapolis Indians are a minor league baseball team in Indianapolis, Indiana, which plays in the International League. The Triple-A affiliate of the Major League Baseball Pittsburgh Pirates, the Indians play at Victory Field in downtown Indianapolis. The team's mascot is Rowdie the Bear. Founded in 1902, the Indianapolis Indians are the second-oldest minor league franchise in American professional baseball. Charley Carr was the manager of the team in 1909. It appears from a review of available newspaper coverage of Sam Winchester that he played in various minor league baseball teams from 1907 to 1911.

- Occupation: Worked for the Nickel Plate Railroad [From World War II Draft Registration Card - 1942]

New York, Chicago and St. Louis Railroad Company, byname The Nickel Plate, American railroad that began operations between Buffalo, N.Y., and Chicago in 1882. That same year William H. Vanderbilt purchased control because its tracks paralleled those of his Lake Shore and Michigan Southern road between Buffalo and Cleveland, Ohio.

In 1916 the Nickel Plate became part of the railroad empire of the Van Sweringen brothers. They were the developers of the Cleveland suburb of Shaker Heights, and they needed a transit line to the city. As president they appointed John J. Bernet, who made the Nickel Plate a profitable line, rehabilitating and modernizing it. They added several other lines until the railroad had over 1,700 miles (2,700 km) of operating track between Buffalo, N.Y.; Wheeling, W.Va.; Chicago; and St. Louis, Mo. In 1964 the line was merged with the Norfolk and Western, giving the N&W a rail network extending from the Atlantic to the Great Lakes. [From Britannica.com]

- Born: June 9, 1893 in Cleveland, Ohio [From Death Certificate]
- Occupation: Collector and Salesman for P.F. Collier & Sons (Collier's Encyclopedias) [From World War I Draft Registration Card] and Templar Motors Shell Dept. [From Employee Identification Card]

  Templar was a manufacturer of automobiles in Lakewood, Ohio from 1917 to 1924. The company was named for the Knights Templar and used a Maltese Cross as an emblem.

  Advertising themselves as "The pioneer builder of quality small cars", the first Templar car had a four-cylinder, overhead-valve engine of 3.2 litres capacity coupled to a three-speed transmission mounted in a chassis with a 118-inch (3,000 mm) wheelbase. The entry of the United States into World War I severely curtailed production, the company making artillery shells for the war effort. Only around 150 cars were made in 1918. Body styles included a coupe with coachwork by Leon Rubay at US$4250, a Victoria Elite tourer, a 3-door sedan and a sports model called the Sportette at US$2400. The cars were extremely well equipped with a compass and Kodak camera as standard equipment.

  By late 1924 it seems the money ran out, and the company passed into the ownership of a local bank who had called in a loan, and production ceased. [From Wikipedia.com]

[Obituary from Cleveland Plain Dealer May 11, 2010]

Maynard Leroy Murch was born on March 26, 1916 in Cleveland, Ohio. His father was Frank Stuart Murch and his mother was Elizabeth M. Winchester Murch. Maynard's father was 22 years old and his mother was 19 years old at the time of his birth. Frank's occupation was collector and Elizabeth's was housewife. He was the only child by Frank and Elizabeth Murch as Frank died three years after Maynard's birth in 1919. Elizabeth married Erik Lovegren in 1921.

The Lovegren family lived on Wakefield Avenue between Detroit and Lorain Avenues on the West side of Cleveland, Ohio. Maynard attended Lawn Elementary School from 1922 to 1928. In the fifth grade he received a certificate for penmanship. Maynard attended West Junior High from 1928 to 1930. He then attended West High School on West 65th in Cleveland, Ohio from 1930 to 1934 where he graduated with his high school diploma. From 1924 (when Maynard was eight years old) until he graduated High School in 1934, he was a carrier for the Cleveland Press newspaper.

Maynard's first job after graduation was with Cleveland Heater Company on 11200 Locust. He worked for this firm from May 1934 to September 1937. After several short lived jobs Maynard got a Bus Driver position with the Cleveland Transit System in September 1940 and was there until he got his position with the Cleveland Illuminating Company in 1953.

Maynard and Anna Elizabeth Franz were married on October 10, 1936 in Westfield, Chautauqua County, New York. As there were no witnesses from Cleveland and Westfield being just over the New York state line, it is likely that the two eloped. The two waited for Anne to graduate from high school before they got married. Maynard was 20 years old and Anne was 18. Maynard once recalled how he and a friend were walking by a candy store one day and he remarked after first seeing Anne, that he was going to make her his wife. He kept his word.

On February 24, 1941, Maynard and Anne had their first child, Maynard (Jerry) Gerald Murch. Over the next decade, Maynard and Anne had three girls Jean, Janis, and Joyce.

In 1948, Maynard and Anne purchased their first house, a 1,201sf 3 Bedroom I½ Bath Dutch Colonial built in 1919 located at 3405 West 120th Street, Cleveland, Ohio. They cashed in $11,000 in US Savings Bonds and help from the GI Bill. This type of Colonial was popular housing in the early 1900s.

Maynard was a US Navy veteran that served in World War II and the Korean War.

On November 18, 1957, tragedy fell on the Murch family as Jerry caught the Asian Flu and he died on November 18, 1957 at the age of 16. The family has never fully recovered from this tragic loss.

Maynard and Anne's second and last home was purchased in 1963. It was a 1,107sf three bedroom 1.5 bath brick bungalow located at 14501 Caldwell Avenue, in Cleveland's West Park area near 145th Street and Lorain Avenue.

In 1980 after 27 years, Maynard retired from the Cleveland Electric Illuminating Company where he was a Senior Electrical Tester in the System Operation and Test division.

Maynard and Anne enjoyed a long retirement in reasonably good health until 2009 when health issues caused them to move into their daughter Joyce's home in Medina, Ohio.

Maynard died at his daughter Joyce's home in Medina, Ohio on May 9, 2010 from coronary disease. He was 94 years old. He had been married to Anne for 73 ½ years. He is buried beside his wife Anne at Holy Cross Cemetery in Brook Park, Ohio.

MEACHAM, Levi Emerson,

City Official, Legislator, Civil War Veteran.

There was a quality in the character of Levi Emerson Meacham, of Cleveland, Ohio, which heredity alone can explain, for under that law he was rightfully entitled to those traits which he possessed in such a wonderful degree—patriotism inherited from his Pilgrim ancestor, Captain Miles Standish, of the Plymouth Colony; gentleness, sympathy, cheerfulness, religious fervor from his wonderful mother, Lucina Emerson Meacham, who with two sons in the service volunteered as a nurse, and while relieving physical suffering sang Gospel songs to the soldiers, pointed them to the Cross, and continued her self-sacrificing work until the cruel Civil War ended. From two such sources came the strength of the manly side of Mr. Meacham's character, and those gentle traits which we associate with the softer womanly side. He was left fatherless when a child of two months, hence it was his gentle, loving mother who formed the lad's character, and it was his reverence for that mother that made him the devoted husband and father, whose kingdom was the home. How tender was that love is revealed in these words: "I would love to stay with my family one day more here—one day less for them to be alone. But it's all right, we have had a happy life." In public life he was the soul of trustworthiness. He made multitudes of friends by his courtesy, fidelity and efficiency without any thought of political reward. He was a public servant who did not seek the office, but the office sought the man in his case.

The founder of the Meacham family in Cuyahoga county, Ohio, was Isaac Meacham, born in Vermont, in the town of Pawlet, February 13, 1791, a son of Isaac and Lucy (Standish) Meacham, his father a soldier of the Revolution, his mother a descendant of Captain Miles Standish, of the "Mayflower." Isaac Meacham moved from Vermont to New York State while still a young man, settling at Richland, Oswego county, where he married Sophia Champney. They moved to Chautauqua county, New York, and in 1820 to Middleburg, Cuyahoga county, Ohio, where he settled on a farm, which he cultivated until his death in 1868, aged seventy-seven. Isaac and Sophia (Champney) Meacham were the parents of nine children, including a son, Levi Meacham.

Levi Meacham was born at Sandy Creek, Oswego county, New York, in 1819, and was brought to Ohio in 1820 from Chautauqua county, New York, where his parents stopped for a time. He grew up amid the pioneer surroundings that prevailed in Cuyahoga county at that early period, and became a farmer, but his life was a short one and he died in December, 1846.

Levi Meacham married Lucina B. (Emerson) Nicholas, born March 2, 1822, the first white child born in Parma township, Cuyahoga county, Ohio. She was the daughter of Asa and Sally (Small) Emerson, and widow of Charles Nicholas. She died at her home in Parma, Ohio, November 29, 1895. Levi and Lucina B. (Emerson-Nicholas) Meacham were the parents of a son, Levi Emerson, of further mention. Mrs. Meacham, by her former marriage, had one son, Oscar Nicholas, who served in the Civil War and was three times wounded. In November, 1861, Mrs. Meacham, during the Civil War period, volunteered as a nurse and continued in the service until the close of the war, accomplishing great good in the hospitals through her loving care of the sick and the wounded. She was a noble woman, her sterling character and virtues being reflected in the life of her son, Levi Emerson

178. ISAAC[5] MEACHAM (Isaac[4], Ichabod[3], Isaac[2], Jeremiah[1]), was born Dec. 25, 1748, at Warren, Mass. He was in Williamstown in 1775 when he enlisted on May 1st of that year with the rank of Sergeant in Capt. A. Angel's Co. of Col. David Brewer's 6th Regt. for three months' service. He also served from Aug. 1, 1777 to Aug. 21 of the same year in Capt. Samuel Clark's Co., Benjamin Simond's Berkshire Regt. On Sept. 20, 1776, he married LUCY STANDISH and subsequently moved to Vermont with his brothers Jacob and Abraham. The Census of 1790 records Isaac Meacham at Pawlet, Vt. with a family of four boys and two females. He finally moved to Sandy Creek, N. Y., where he died Aug. 16, 1829, and where his widow, Lucy, died Jan. 13, 1840.

Children: 5 (Meacham):—

406. i. John[6], b. 1777; moved to Pulaski, N. Y.; no further published record.
407. ii. Jabez[6], b. 1785; mar. S. Terrill; built the lighthouse on Lake Ontario at Salmon River, N. Y.
408. iii. Isaac[6], b. Feb. 13, 1791, at Pawlet, Vt.; mar. Jan. 1812, Sophia Champney. Soldier in War of 1812; in 1847 settled at Middleburg, Ohio; d. Nov. 20, 1867, at Parma (family records); had 3 sons and 6 daughters.
409. iv. Thomas[6], b. Feb. 16, 1794, at Pawlet, Vt.; d. March 20, 1824, at Richland, N. Y. Had 7 children.
410. v. Persis[6], noted by I. M. S.

179. JACOB[5] MEACHAM (Isaac[4], Ichabod[3], Isaac[2], Jeremiah[1]), was born Aug. 31, 1750, at Warren, Worcester Co., Mass. His name appears in conjunction with those of his brothers Isaac and Abraham among the soldiers who enlisted from Williamstown, Mass., in the Co. of A. Angel for three months' service from May 1, 1775. He also enlisted from Castleton, Vt., Oct. 1781 for 10 days' service. The Census of 1790 shows him a resident of Hinesburg, Chittenden Co., Vt. with a family of three boys and three females. No further record. Married MARTHA TUTTLE, d. abt. 1820 near Cadiz, Harrison Co., Ohio.

Children: 7 (Meacham) (I. M. S.):—

411. i. Hines[6], b. April 1, 1785, Hinesburg, Vt.; d. July 5, 1865, Belle Plaine, Minn.; mar. (2) Lorena Wetmore.

416. vi. Sarah[6], b. ——; d. ——; mar. —— Tooley.
417. vii. Jacob[6], d. in childhood "aged 12 years."

180. ABRAHAM[5] MEACHAM (Isaac[4], Ichabod[3], Isaac[2], Jeremiah[1]), born June 24, 1753, at Warren, Mass. He was with his brothers Isaac and Jacob in Williamstown, Mass., when they all enlisted in the Company of Capt. Abiathar Angel on May 1, 1775, for three months' service. On Oct. 15, 1778, he married LYDIA STANDISH, at Williamstown. He would seem to have gone with his kinsman, Jonathan[5] Meacham (No. 132 ante) to Fair Haven, Vt., in 1779, for they were together in Capt. Zadoc Everest's Co. in April 1781 and with Capt. John Stark in 1780. And he was again with him as one of the first settlers of Benson, Vt., in 1783. In Pawlet Census 1790 1-3-3. (Rev. Thompson's History of Vt., part 3); died Dec. 24, 1822, at Pawlet, Vt. (Boston Transcript, March 11, 1931).

Children: 9 (Meacham):—

(2) ELIZABETH ———, who survived him, was administratrix of his estate, and was authorized by the General Court in May 1728 to sell part of the estate to meet a small total of outstanding debts. (Connecticut Colonial Records, vol. 7, p. 167.)

v. JOSIAH, d. 26 Mar. 1753 (MS. of the late Wesley Weyman, box 4, package 34); m. SARAH ——— (DOTY, according to the Weyman MS.), who d. 16 Jan. or 16 June 1741 (ib.). They had several children bapt. at Preston (Preston Church Statistics). The family moved to Stafford, Conn., in 1719 (Caulkins's History of Norwich, p. 251). He was one of the twelve first settlers of Stafford (History of Tolland County, by J. R. Cole, p. 485). On 15 Apr. 1729 "Josiah Standish of Stafford" sold all his rights in the "real estate that my brother Myles Standish late of Preston Dyes Seized of" (Preston Land Records, vol. 4, p. 475, quoted in the Wesley Weyman MS., box 4, package 34).

vi. SAMUEL, b. at Duxbury about 1680; m. (1) 5 June 1710 DEBORAH GATES, b. at Stow in 1684, daughter of Thomas and Elizabeth (Freeman) Gates, who came to Preston about 1703 with her parents (Genealogy of the Gates Family, by Charles Otis Gates, p. 13, and interpretations); m. (2) 15 Jan. 1745 MRS. HANNAH PARKE, who d. 25 Nov. 1757. (The Standishes of America, pp. 11, 13).

He moved to Preston with his father; and he and his first wife were church members at Preston, where their children were baptized (Preston Church Statistics, p. 141). He was licensed to tan leather there in 1706 (Caulkins's History of Norwich, p. 251). He was the only one of the surname listed as a church member in Preston in 1744 (Preston Church Statistics, p. 152). This shows that his first wife was then dead and that his brothers and sisters had either died or moved away. His farm was located both in Norwich and in Preston. The four brothers, Miles, Josiah, Samuel, and Israel Standish, "being proper heirs of ye land of our Honored father Josiah Standish of Preston, late deceased, we the four brothers owners of lands lying partly in Preston and Partly in Norwich as may appear by a deed from Capt. John Parke and by a town grant in the division of the commons," agree among themselves by deed that a part of the lands of Miles, Josiah, and Israel be conveyed to Samuel, 2 May 1715. (Preston Land Records, vol. 3, p. 48, quoted in the Wesley Weyman MS., box 4, package 34.)

vii. ISRAEL, d. before January 1730, when his children were called heirs of their uncle Miles (Preston Land Records, vol. 4, p. 657, quoted in the Wesley Weyman MS., box 4, package 34); m. 8 Feb. 1704 ELIZABETH RICHARDS, daughter of William and Mary (? Williams) Richards. They were church members, and their children were baptized at Preston (Preston Church Statistics, p. 130, etc.).

viii. LOIS, m. new Bible to his son John of Stow. John had received land in Stow by gift of his father. He mentioned sons Joseph and Josiah who had received their portions, but he gave some more land to Joseph. He gave to son Caleb part of his homestead. Caleb's oldest son, Thomas, when he became of age, was to receive the rest of the homestead, "both lands, buildings and orchards, never to be sold or mortgaged." He mentioned daughters Elizabeth Holmes, Deborah Standish, Abigail Fobes, Sarah and Ruth, then single, and Mary Rose. The inventory amounted to £535. 6s.

He was "of Norwich" in 1723, when he made his will, but his death was recorded in Preston. His land was probably partly in Norwich and partly in Preston.

5. STEPHEN[3] GATES (Stephen,[2] Stephen[1]), born in Lancaster, Mass., 17 July 1665, died in Preston, Conn., 4 Nov. 1732.

He married in Stow, Mass., 8 Nov. 1686, JEMIMA BENJAMIN, daughter of Joseph[2] Benjamin (John[1]).

They removed from Stow to Preston before 6 June 1694, when they sold land to his brother Simon.

He left a will, not dated, but proved 30 Nov. 1732. He mentioned his wife Jemima, sons Stephen and Isaac, daughters Thankful Woodward, Mercy Foster, Jemima Clark, Sarah Clark and Elizabeth Downing. By the terms of the will his daughters were to receive £100 each.

"In 1711 the town of Preston granted to Stephen Gates 14 acres and water power running through it on condition that he maintain a saw and grist mill. The land is now in the town of Griswold at Hopeville. In 1742 his son Stephen Gates Jr. set apart one acre for a burying place. The Gates

6 THE FAMILY OF MYLES STANDISH

4 JOSIAH[2] STANDISH (Myles[1]) b. Plymouth ca. 1633; d. Preston CT 19 March 1690.

He m. (1) Marshfield 19 Dec. 1654 MARY DINGLEY; d. Duxbury 1 July 1655; dau. of John and Sarah(?) (-----) Dingley.

He m. (2) after 7 March 1655/6 (father's will) SARAH ALLEN, b. Braintree 30 March 1639; d. after 16 Sept. 1690; dau. of Samuel and Ann (-----) Allen. The will of Samuel Allen of Braintry dated 2 Aug. 1669 mentions son-in-law Josiah Standish and others.

✓On 6 June 1660 Josias Standish was approved as Lt. of the military company of Bridgewater. By 10 July 1663 he was "of Sandwich" when he purchased land and he was "Celect Man" from Duxborrow by 5 June 1666.

On 7 June 1665 Lt. Josias Standish was chosen as one of the Deputies of Plymouth Colony. He was frequently chosen to serve in this position.

Josiah Standish lived in Duxbury as late as 4 Oct. 1686 when he witnessed a deed of Edmund Weston. Shortly after that date, he must have moved to Norwich CT for on 5 Feb. 1686 John Parks sold 150 acres to Capt. Josiah Standish now in Norwich. On 17 March 1687 Oaneco quitclaimed a tract of land to Capt. James Fitch, Capt. Josiah Standish, Thomas Parke Sen., Jonathan Trasy, Thomas Trasy, Joseph Morgan, and all the rest of the inhabitants living in New Preson [sic]. Josiah lived in Preston CT the last years of his life.

Captain Josiah Standish's widow and son Miles were granted administration of his estate 16 Sept. 1690. The court accepted an agreement between the widow and the children but apparently it wasn't recorded.

On 2 May 1715 Miles Standish, Josiah Standish, Samuel Standish and Israel Standish as heirs of their father Josiah Standish of Preston "who deceased March 19th, 1690" conveyed their part of land partly in Preston and partly in Norwich to brother Samuel Standish.

On 22 June 1730 Martha Standish sold her share of her father's estate to her brother Samuel Standish. She died before she ack. the deed, so on 16 April 1731 her "coheirs" relinquished their rights. Signing the release were her brother Josiah Standish; her sisters Lois Sprague, Marcy Wheelock and Mary Cary; Ralph Wheelock, husband of Marcy; the four children of her brother Israel Standish, namely Prudence Sawyer and Amie, Elizabeth and Miles Standish and Jacob Sawyer, husband of Prudence.

IV. JOSIAS² STANDISH AND HIS FAMILY

JOSIAS² STANDISH, as he was called by his father and in most of the early records, or JOSIAH STANDISH, as his name was written in later life, born probably in 1633, died at Preston, Conn., 19 Mar. 1690 (Genealogical and Biographical Record of New London County, 1905, p. 754). As Josias Standish he married first, 19 Dec. 1654, MARY DINGLEY (Marshfield Vital Records, in The Mayflower Descendant, vol. 2, p. 4), who, as the wife of "Josias Standish of duxberough," died "ye first of July 1655," and was buried at "duxberough" (ib., vol. 2, p. 5, and REGISTER, vol. 8, p. 192); and secondly SARAH ALLEN, who was born 30 Mar. 1639 and survived her husband, daughter of Samuel and Ann Allen of Braintree. (Cf. the REGISTER, vol. 10, p. 225, vol. 19, p. 310, Weaver's History of Windham, Conn., 1864, p. 33, and the Boston Evening Transcript, 4 Nov. 1903, Note 485. The MS. of the late Wesley Weyman, box 4, package 34, asserts that the maiden name of Ann Allen was Whitmore, but gives no authority.)

Josias Standish lived first in Duxbury. He purchased a tract of land in the grant which was made to Duxbury and which was later incorporated as Bridgewater, and he was included in the first group of men who were made freemen there, in May 1657. After a few years he returned to Duxbury. (Mitchell's History of Bridgewater, pp. 27, 28.) On 1 July 1668 he received a permit, with others, from Gov. Thomas Mayhew to trade in land and other property at Martha's Vineyard, and for several years carried on this trade, although he never lived there. (Annals of West Tisbury, p. 11, in Banks's History of Martha's Vineyard, vol. 2.) At one time, in 1661–1663, he also owned land at Mannomet, on the side of the Mannomet River next to Sandwich (The Mayflower Descendant, vol. 18, pp. 87, 88). Several times he bought land in "Duxborrow" (Plymouth Colony Deeds, vol. 3, p. 61, vol. 4, p. 116, etc., quoted in The Mayflower Descendant, vol. 16, pp. 250, 251, vol. 19, p. 97, vol. 25, p. 147). He was in Duxbury as late as 4 Oct. 1686, when he witnessed a deed (Pilgrim Notes and Queries, vol. 5, p. 67).

He was a lieutenant and later a captain of the company for defense at Duxbury. He was also a selectman and a deputy to the General Court of the Plymouth Colony (The Standishes of America, p. 7). He sat in the War Council 7 June 1667 (MS. of the late Wesley Weyman, box 4, package 34).

The first mention of Capt. Josiah Standish in the vicinity of Norwich, Conn., is in a deed of sale, dated 5 Feb. 1687, from "John Parks of the new plantation east of Norwich," which was later incorporated as Preston, to "Capt. Josiah Standish now in Norwich," of 150 acres "over Showtucket River upon the hill between Mr. Fitch's farm and Pocketannuck." The same year he purchased a 1000-acre right in Windham, near the site of the present Willimantic (The

MYLES STANDISH

Myles Standish was probably born on the Isle of Man or at least his ancestors lived there. There is much recent research on his ancestry based on the claim in his will to various lands. These lands belonged to the Standish family living on the Isle of Man.

Nathaniel Morton wrote "In his younger time he went over into the Low-contreys, and was a souldier there and came acquainted with the Church of Leyden, and came over into New-England with such of them as at the first set out for Planting of the Plantation of New-Plimoth, and bare a deep share of their first Difficulties, and was alwayes very faithful to their Interest."

He was the Captain and leader of the Plymouth Colony military forces from the first and continuously until his death in 1656.

He is first mentioned as an Assistant 1 Jan. 1632-3, but was probably an Assistant before then. He frequently held that position up to the year he died. He was first elected Treasurer in 1644 and was frequently elected to that office up to 1655. On 3 May 1653 he was appointed Deputy Governor in the absence of the Governor.

He was one of the first to settle in that part of Plymouth Colony that was to become Duxbury and lived there the rest of his life.

At his death he had a large number (for those times) of books on a wide range of subjects.

According to William Hubbard's history "Captain Standish ... never entered the school of our saviour Christ, or of John Baptist, his harbinger."

MYLES STANDISH

1 MYLES[1] STANDISH b. perhaps on The Isle of Man* ca. 1584; d. Duxbury 3 Oct. 1656.

He m. (1) ROSE -----, d. Plymouth 29 Jan. 1620/1.

He m. (2) Plymouth bet. July 1623 and 24 March 1623/4 BARBARA -----, d. after 6 Oct. 1659 (E. Hopkins' inv.).

Captain Myles Standish and his wife Rose came on the "Mayflower." His second wife Barbara came over in 1623 on the "Anne."

Bradford's account says "Captain Standish his wife dyed in the first sicknes; and he maried againe, and hath 4 sones liveing, and some are dead."

In the 1623 Division of Land, Capt. Myles Standish received 2 acres and Mrs. Standish received one acre. This proves he had married Barbara by this time. In the 1627 Division of cattle Capt. Standish is listed with wife Barbara and children Charles, Alexander and John.

On 2 July 1638 Captain Myles Standish was granted 300 acres of uplands.

Myles Standish is listed as Capt. Standish in the 1643 list of Duxbury men 16-60 able to bear arms. This implies he was born after Aug. 1583. His son Alexander is also in the same list.

On 9 May 1654 Capt. Myles Standish sold to Capt. Thomas Willett his purchaser's right at Sowamsett, Mattapoisett and places adjacent. Mrs. Barberye Standish consented to the deed.

The will of Captaine Myles Standish Sr. of Duxburrow, dated 7 March 1655/6, proved 4 May 1657, mentions dau. Lora Standish, deceased; Mary Standish "my Daughter in law" deceased; wife Barbara Standish; son Josias Standish "upon his marriage"; sons Alexander, Myles, Josias and Charles Standish; Marcye Robinson; servant John Irish Jr.

The inventory of Elizabeth Hopkins dated 6 Oct. 1659 mentions "a smale matter in Mrs. Standishes hand." This is the last known reference to Barbara.

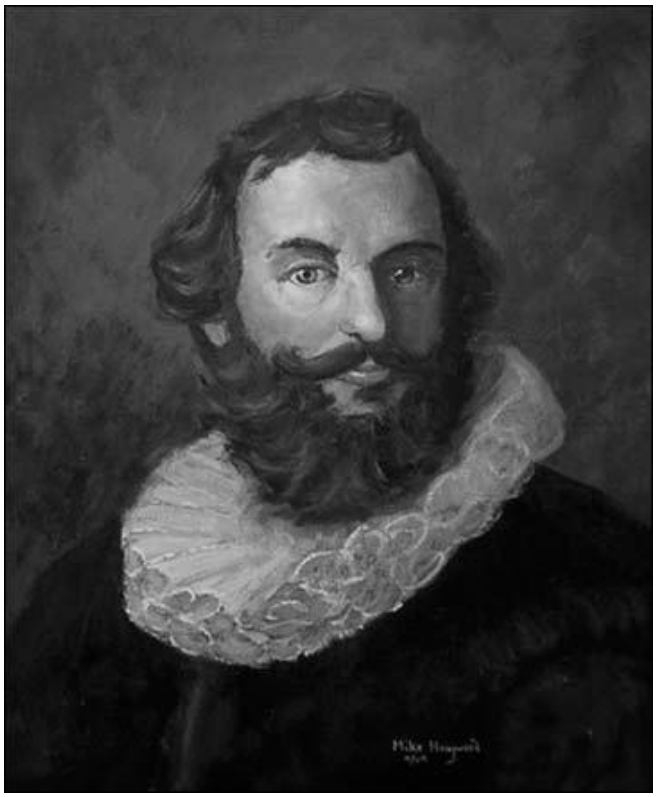
BIRTH: Traditionally 1584, but something closer to 1587 seems more probable, probably in co. Lancashire, England.
FIRST MARRIAGE: Rose, probably not long before 1619 or 1620, since they had no children yet.
SECOND MARRIAGE: Barbara, sometime about 1623 at Plymouth.
CHILDREN (by Barbara): Charles (died young), Alexander, John, Myles, Lora, Josias, and Charles.
DEATH: 3 October 1656 at Duxbury.
yDNA HAPLOGROUP: I-L38



This modern portrait of Myles Standish by Mike Haywood. It is based off a portrait that was purported to have been done in London in 1626.

Myles Standish's birthplace has been the subject of great debate. Those who believe he was from Lancashire point to the following evidence: Nathaniel Morton, writing in his 1669 book New England's Memorial, states that Standish was from Lancashire; Myles Standish owned a book about the former head of the Rivington Grammar School in Lancashire; and Standish named his American residence "Duxbury," which may have been a reference to his ancestral home, Duxbury Hall, Lancashire. Those that believe he was from the Isle of Man point to the lands enumerated in his probate will that were "surreptitiously detained" from him (including lands on the Isle of Man itself); these lands all belonged at one time to Thomas Standish, of the branch of the Standish family from the Isle of Man. In September 2006, Jeremy D. Bangs supplied a scholarly review of the evidence and controversy in "Myles Standish, Born Where?", Mayflower Quarterly 72:133-159.

Myles Standish is alleged to have joined Queen Elizabeth's army and attained the rank of Lieutenant, but the documentation for this claim was lost in the 1920s without having been published or transcribed, so may be suspect. In any case, Standish was certainly a part of Queen Elizabeth's army, and was stationed for a time in Holland where he eventually met and became well acquainted with John Robinson and the Pilgrims who were living in Leiden. Standish was hired by the Pilgrims to be their military captain, to establish and coordinate the Colony's defense against both foreign (French, Spanish, Dutch) and domestic (Native American) threats.

This iron cooking pot is believed to have belonged to Myles Standish. It is on display at the Pilgrim Hall Museum in Plymouth.

Standish led or participated in all the early exploratory missions sent out to explore Cape Cod, and was heavily involved in selecting the site where the Pilgrims would settle. He was one of the few who did not get sick at all the first winter, and is recorded as having greatly helped and cared for those who were sick. He organized the deployment of the colony's cannons and the construction of the fort at Plymouth. He led both trading expeditions and military expeditions to the various Indian groups in the region. He led the party that went in pursuit of the alleged killers of Squanto (who was later discovered to be safe). He led the revenge attacks on the Indians in the Massachusetts Bay after they were caught in a conspiracy planning to attack and destroy the Plymouth and Wessagussett colonies; several Indians were killed or executed, for which Standish received some criticism, even from his friends, for being too heavy-handed.

Standish was heavily involved in numerous aspects of Plymouth Colony, from defense to keeping the law. He was on the receiving end of John Billington's verbal wrath in 1621 (Billington refused to follow the captain's orders), and was called a "silly boy" in a letter that was sent out during the Oldham-Lyford scandal of 1624, and was noted for his short stature and for his quick temper. He was sent to arrest Thomas Morton in 1628, for which he received the nickname "Captain Shrimp" from Morton. William Hubbard reported Standish's temper was like a "chimney soon fired".

17th century image of a man in armor with musket. Myles Standish would have worn similar armor, clothing and used similar weapons to those seen here.

Despite the heavy criticism by his enemies, Standish was well respected within the Plymouth Colony, and held a number of positions of authority. He made several trips to England to bring trading goods back and to negotiate with the Merchant Adventurers who had financially sponsored the joint-stock company that funded the Pilgrims' voyage. In the mid-1630s, Standish moved his family and helped found the town of Duxbury, which may have been named after his ancestral home. Standish was an heir to a fairly sizeable estate in Lancashire, but his lands were lost during the English Civil War, and neither he nor his son Alexander were ever able to legally regain control of the estate.

Myles Standish's first wife Rose came with him on the Mayflower, and died the first winter. His second wife, Barbara, arrived on the ship Anne in 1623, and they were apparently married before the year was out. Nothing is known about either of his wives: there is absolutely no indication they were his cousins, as has sometimes been claimed.

Standish lived out his later years in Duxbury, dying in 1656 "after his suffering of much dolorous pain," apparently from kidney stones.

Myles Standish

Myles Standish (c. 1584 – October 3, 1656) was an English military officer hired by the Pilgrims as military adviser for Plymouth Colony. He accompanied them on the Mayflower journey and played a leading role in the administration and defense of Plymouth Colony from its inception.[2] On February 17, 1621, the Plymouth Colony militia elected him as its first commander and continued to re-elect him to that position for the remainder of his life.[3]

Standish served as an agent of Plymouth Colony in England, as assistant governor, and as treasurer of the Colony.[4] He was also one of the first settlers and founders of the town of Duxbury, Massachusetts.[5]

A defining characteristic of Standish's military leadership was his proclivity for preemptive action which resulted in at least two attacks (or small skirmishes) on different groups of Native Americans—the Nemasket raid and the conflict at Wessagusset Colony. During these actions, Standish exhibited considerable courage and skill as a soldier, but also demonstrated a brutality that angered Native Americans and disturbed more moderate members of the Colony.[6]

One of Standish's last military actions on behalf of Plymouth Colony was the botched Penobscot expedition in 1635. By the 1640s, he relinquished his role as an active soldier and settled into a quieter life on his Duxbury farm. He was still nominally the commander of the Pilgrim military forces in the growing Colony, although he seems to have preferred to act in an advisory capacity.[7] He died in his home in Duxbury in 1656 at age 72.[8] He supported and defended the Pilgrims' colony for much of his life, though there is no evidence to suggest that he ever joined their church.[9]

Several towns and military installations have been named for Standish, and monuments have been built in his memory. One of the best known depictions of him in popular culture was the 1858 poem The Courtship of Miles Standish by Henry Wadsworth Longfellow. The highly fictionalized story presents him as a timid romantic.[10] It was extremely popular in the 19th century and played a significant role in cementing the Pilgrim story in US culture.[11]

Birthplace and early military service

Little is definitively known of Myles Standish's origin and early life. His place of birth has been subject to debate among historians for more than 150 years.[12] At the center of the debate is language in his will, drafted in Plymouth Colony in 1656, regarding his rights of inheritance. Standish wrote:

I give unto my son & heire apparent Alexander Standish all my lands as heire apparent by lawfull decent in Ormskirke [Ormskirk] Borscouge [Burscough] Wrightington Maudsley [Mawdesley] Newburrow [Newburgh] Crowston [Croston] and in the Isle of man [sic] and given to mee as Right heire by lawfull decent but Surruptuously detained from mee My great Grandfather being a 2cond or younger brother from the house of Standish of Standish.[12]

The places named by Standish are all in Lancashire, England, with the exception of the Isle of Man, leading some to conclude that he was born in Lancashire—possibly in the vicinity of Chorley, where a branch of the Standish family owned a manor known as Duxbury Hall.[13] However, efforts have been inconclusive in linking him to the Standishes of Duxbury Hall. A competing theory focuses on his mention of the Isle of Man and argues that he belonged to a Manx branch of the Standish family. No definitive documentation exists in either location to provide clear evidence of his birthplace.[12]

Possibly the best source, however brief, on Standish's origin and early life is a short passage recorded by Nathaniel Morton, secretary of Plymouth Colony, who wrote in his New England's Memorial, published in 1669, that Standish:
...was a gentleman, born in Lancashire, and was heir apparent unto a great estate of lands and livings, surreptitiously detained from him; his great grandfather being a second or younger brother from the house of Standish. In his younger time he went over into the low countries, and was a soldier there, and came acquainted with the church at Leyden, and came over into New England, with such of them as at the first set out for the planting of the plantation of New Plymouth, and bare a deep share of their first difficulties, and was always very faithful to their interest.[14]

The circumstances are vague at best concerning Standish's early military career in Holland (the "low countries" to which Morton referred). At the time, the Dutch Republic was embroiled in the Eighty Years' War with Spain. Queen Elizabeth I of England chose to support the Protestant Dutch Republic and sent troops to fight the Spanish in Holland. Historians are divided on his role in the English military. Nathaniel Philbrick refers to Standish as a "mercenary", suggesting that he was a hired soldier of fortune seeking opportunity in Holland,[15] but Justin Winsor claims that Standish received a lieutenant's commission in the English army and was subsequently promoted to captain in Holland.[13] Jeremy Bangs, a leading scholar of Pilgrim history, noted that Standish likely served under Sir Horatio Vere, an English general who had recruited soldiers in both Lancashire and the Isle of Man, among other places, and who led the English troops in Holland at the time when Standish was there.[12]

Whether commissioned officer, mercenary, or both, Standish apparently came to Holland around 1603 and, according to historian Tudor Jenks, may have seen service during the siege of Sluis in 1604, in which Vere's English troops were involved. The subsequent Twelve Years' Truce (1609–1621) between Spain and the Dutch Republic might have ended Standish's service.[16]

Standish was certainly still in Holland in 1620 and living in Leiden when he was hired by a group of refugee Puritan dissenters from England to act as their adviser on military matters.[17] At that time, he was using the title of "Captain." When considering candidates for this important position, the Puritans had at first hoped to engage Captain John Smith, one of the founders of the English colony at Jamestown, Virginia who had also explored and mapped the North American coast. They approached him to return to the New World and he expressed interest. His experience made him an attractive candidate, but the Pilgrims ultimately decided against him; his price was too high and they feared that his fame and bold character might lead him to become a dictator.[18] Standish lived in Leiden with his wife Rose and was apparently already known to them.[12]

Voyage to New Plymouth

On July 22, 1620 (Old Style date), the initial group of English Dissenters living in Leiden boarded the Speedwell, which was meant to accompany another ship to be hired in England. This initial group included the mostly Brownist congregation. Myles and Rose Standish were aboard, along with the Bradfords, Winslows, Carvers, and others. The small, 60-ton pinnace sailed to Southampton with about 30 passengers, to be provisioned there and join a much larger vessel for the voyage to the New World. Another 90 passengers would board the 180-ton Mayflower. The Speedwell had some significant leaks while in port that caused delays, but both vessels departed Southampton August 5.[19]

The leaders of the colony decided to leave the smaller Speedwell behind after numerous delays caused by leaking, which had caused them to return to port twice. The Standishes and most of the Speedwell passengers crowded into the Mayflower, and the Speedwell went on to London to be resold, now with only a few passengers.[19] (She subsequently made numerous successful journeys as a cargo vessel for her new owners, but never sailed to the New World.) The Mayflower passengers, meanwhile, sold some valuable supplies such as butter to pay the mounting port fees, and finally departed Plymouth, England on September 6, 1620, bound for the northern part of the Virginia Colony.

The passage of the Mayflower across the North Atlantic lasted more than two months, with 102 passengers crowded onto the cargo ship's gun deck and about 30 crew members. The seas were not severe during the first month of the voyage but, by the second month, the ship was being hit by strong autumn gales, causing it to be badly shaken with water leaks from structural damage. One passenger died at sea, and four others while the ship was anchored at Cape Cod.[20]

On November 9, 1620, lookouts spotted land, but it was quickly appreciated that their location was about 200 miles east-northeast of their planned destination of northern Virginia, near what is now called Cape Cod. They tried briefly to sail south, but strong seas forced them to retreat to Cape Cod to harbor near the "hook" of present-day Provincetown Harbor.[21] It became apparent that the weather would not permit the passage south, so they decided to settle near Cape Cod. Shortage of supplies (including wood and beer) and the roaring Atlantic made it too dangerous to press on for a Virginia landing. They anchored at the hook on November 11, but not before signing a significant document.[19] The leaders of the colony wrote the Mayflower Compact to ensure a degree of law and order in this place where they had not been granted a patent to settle. Myles Standish was one of the 41 men who signed the document.[22]

Establishment of Plymouth Colony

When the Mayflower was anchored off Cape Cod, Standish urged the colony's leaders to allow him to take a party ashore to find a suitable place for settlement.[23] On November 15, 1620, he led 16 men in a foot exploration of the northern portion of the Cape.[24] On December 11, a group of 18 settlers, including Standish, made an extended exploration of the shore of Cape Cod by boat,[25] spending their nights ashore surrounded by makeshift barricades of tree branches. The settlers were attacked one night by a group of about 30 Native Americans. At first, the Englishmen panicked, but Standish calmed them, urging the settlers not to fire their matchlock muskets unnecessarily.[26] The incident took place in present-day Eastham, Massachusetts and came to be known as the First Encounter.

After further exploration, the Pilgrims chose a location in present-day Plymouth Bay in late December 1620 as the site for their settlement. Standish provided important counsel on the placement of a small fort in which cannon were mounted, and on the layout of the first houses for maximum defensibility.[2] Only one house (consisting of a single room) had been built when illness struck the settlers. Of the roughly 100 who first arrived, only 50 survived the first winter.[27] Standish's wife Rose died in January.[28]

Standish was one of the very few who did not fall ill and William Bradford (soon to be governor of Plymouth Colony) credited him with comforting many and being a source of strength to those who suffered.[29] Standish tended to Bradford during his illness, and this was the beginning of a decades-long friendship.[30] Bradford held the position of governor for most of his life and, by necessity, worked closely with Standish. The two men were opposites in terms of character; Bradford was patient and slow to judgment, while Standish was well known for his fiery temper.[31] Despite their differences, the two worked well together in managing the colony and responding to dangers as they arose.[32]

Defense of Plymouth Colony

By February 1621, the colonists had sighted Native Americans several times, but there had been no communication. The men of the colony were anxious to prepare themselves in case of hostilities, so they formed a militia on February 17, 1621 consisting of all able-bodied men, electing Standish as their commander. The leaders of Plymouth Colony had already hired him for that role, but this vote ratified the decision by democratic process.[3] The men of Plymouth Colony continued to re-elect him to that position for the remainder of his life. As captain of the militia, Standish regularly drilled his men in the use of pikes and muskets.[33]

Contact with the Native Americans came in March 1621 through Samoset, an English-speaking Abenaki who arranged for the Pilgrims to meet with Massasoit, the sachem of the nearby Pokanoket tribe. On March 22, the first governor of Plymouth Colony John Carver signed a treaty with Massasoit, declaring an alliance between the Pokanoket and the Englishmen and requiring the two parties to defend each other in times of need.[34] Governor Carver died the same year and the responsibility of upholding the treaty fell to his successor William Bradford. Bradford and Standish were frequently preoccupied with the complex task of reacting to threats against both the Pilgrims and the Pokanokets from tribes such as the Massachusetts and the Narragansetts.[32] As threats arose, Standish typically advocated intimidation to deter their rivals. Such behavior at times made Bradford uncomfortable, but he found it an expedient means of maintaining the treaty with the Pokanokets.[35]

Nemasket raid

The first challenge to the treaty came in August 1621 when a sachem named Corbitant began to undermine Massasoit's leadership. Corbitant worked to turn the people of Nemasket against Massasoit in the Pokanoket village of Nemasket, now the site of Middleborough, Massachusetts, about 14 miles (23 km) west of Plymouth.[32] Bradford sent two trusted interpreters to determine what was happening in Nemasket: Tisquantum (known to the English as Squanto) and Hobbamock. Tisquantum had been pivotal in providing counsel and aid to the Pilgrims, ensuring the survival of the colony. Hobbamock, another influential ally, was a pniese—a high-ranking advisor to Massasoit—and a warrior who commanded particular respect and fear among Native Americans. When Tisquantum and Hobbamock arrived in Nemasket, Corbitant took Tisquantum captive and threatened to kill him. Hobbamock escaped to warn Plymouth.[36]

Bradford and Standish agreed that this represented a dangerous threat to the English-Pokanoket alliance and decided to act quickly. On August 14, 1621, Standish led a group of 10 men to Nemasket, determined to kill Corbitant.[32] They were guided by Hobbamock who quickly befriended Standish, and the two men were close for the remainder of their lives. In his old age, Hobbamock became part of Standish's household in Duxbury.[37]

Reaching Nemasket, Standish planned a night attack on the wigwam in which Corbitant was believed to be sleeping. That night, he and Hobbamock burst into the shelter, shouting for Corbitant. As frightened Pokanokets attempted to escape, Englishmen outside the wigwam fired their muskets, wounding a Pokanoket man and woman who were later taken to Plymouth to be treated. Standish soon learned that Corbitant had already fled the village and Tisquantum was unharmed.[38]

Standish had failed to capture Corbitant, but the raid had the desired effect. On September 13, 1621, nine sachems came to Plymouth, including Corbitant, to sign a treaty of loyalty to King James.[39]

Palisade

In November 1621, a Narragansett messenger arrived in Plymouth and delivered a bundle of arrows wrapped in a snakeskin. The Pilgrims were told by Tisquantum and Hobbamock that this was a threat and an insult from Narragansett sachem Canonicus.[40] The Narragansetts lived west of Narragansett Bay in present-day Rhode Island and were one of the more powerful tribes in the region. Bradford sent back the snakeskin filled with gunpowder and shot in an effort to show that they were not intimidated.[41]

Taking the threat seriously, Standish urged that the colonists encircle their small village with a palisade made of tall, upright logs. The proposal would require a wall more than half a mile (or 0.8 km) long.[42] In addition, Standish recommended the construction of strong gates and platforms for shooting over the wall. The colony had recently been reinforced by the arrival of new colonists from the ship Fortune, but there were still only 50 men to work on the task. Despite the challenges, the settlers constructed the palisade per Standish's recommendations in just three months, finishing in March 1622. Standish divided the militia into four companies, one to man each wall, and drilled them in defending the village in the event of attack.[43]

Wessagusset

A more serious threat came from the Massachusett tribe to the north and was precipitated by the arrival of a new group of English colonists. In April 1622, the vanguard of a new colony arrived in Plymouth. They had been sent by merchant Thomas Weston to establish a new settlement somewhere near Plymouth. The men chose a site on the shore of the Fore River in present-day Weymouth, Massachusetts, about 25 miles (40 km) north of Plymouth. They called their colony Wessagusset. The settlers of the poorly managed colony infuriated the Massachusett tribe through theft and recklessness.[44] By March 1623, Massasoit had learned that a group of influential Massachusett warriors intended to destroy both the Wessagusset and Plymouth colonies. Massasoit warned the Pilgrims to strike first. One of the colonists of Wessagusset named Phineas Pratt verified that his settlement was in danger. Pratt managed to escape to Plymouth and reported that the English in Wessagusset had been repeatedly threatened by the Massachusetts, that the settlement was in a state of constant watchfulness, and that men were dying at their posts from starvation.[45]

Bradford called a public meeting at which the Pilgrims decided to send Standish and a small group of eight, including Hobbamock, to Wessagusset to kill the leaders of the alleged plot to wipe out the English settlements.[46] The mission had a personal aspect for Standish. One of the warriors threatening Wessagusset was Wituwamat, a Neponset who had earlier insulted and threatened Standish.[47]

Arriving at Wessagusset, Standish found that many of the Englishmen had gone to live with the Massachusetts, and he ordered them to be called back to Wessagusset. Pecksuot was a Massachusett warrior and leader of the group threatening Wessagusset; he came to the settlement with Wituwamat and other warriors the day after Standish's arrival. Standish claimed simply to be in Wessagusset on a trading mission, but Pecksuot said to Hobbamock, "Let him begin when he dare... he shall not take us unawares."[48] Later in the day, Pecksuot approached Standish, looking down on him, and said, "You are a great captain, yet you are but a little man. Though I be no sachem, yet I am of great strength and courage."[49]

The next day, Standish arranged to meet with Pecksuot over a meal in one of Wessagusset's one-room houses. Pecksuot brought with him a third warrior named Wituwamat, Wituwamat's adolescent brother, and several women. Standish had three men of Plymouth and Hobbamock with him in the house. On an arranged signal, the English shut the door of the house and Standish attacked Pecksuot, stabbing him repeatedly with the man's own knife.[49] Wituwamat and the third warrior were also killed. Leaving the house, Standish ordered two more Massachusett warriors to be put to death. Gathering his men, Standish went outside the walls of Wessagusset in search of Obtakiest, a sachem of the Massachusett tribe. The Englishmen soon encountered Obtakiest with a group of warriors and a skirmish ensued, during which Obtakiest escaped.[50]

Having accomplished his mission, Standish returned to Plymouth with Wituwamat's head.[51] The leaders of the alleged plot to destroy the English settlements had been killed and the threat removed, but the action had unexpected consequences. The settlement of Wessagusset was all but abandoned after the incident, which Standish had been trying to protect. Most of the settlers departed for an English fishing post on Monhegan Island. The attack also caused widespread panic among Native Americans throughout the region. Villages were abandoned and the Pilgrims had difficulty reviving trade for some time.[52]

Pastor John Robinson was still in Leiden, but he criticized Standish for his brutality.[53] Bradford, too, was uncomfortable with his methods, but he defended him in a letter: "As for Capten Standish, we leave him to answer for him selfe, but this we must say, he is as helpfull an instrument as any we have, and as carefull of the generall good."[54]

Dispersal of Merrymount settlers

In 1625, another group of English settlers established an outpost not far from the site of Wessagusset, located in what is now Quincy, Massachusetts, about 27 miles (43 km) north of Plymouth. The settlement was officially known as Mount Wollaston, but soon earned the nickname "Merrymount." Their leader Thomas Morton encouraged behavior that the Pilgrims found objectionable and dangerous. The men of Merrymount built a maypole, drank liberally, refused to observe the Sabbath, and sold weapons to Native Americans.[55] Bradford found the weapons sales particularly disturbing and ordered Standish to lead an expedition to arrest Morton in 1628.[56]

Standish arrived with a group of men to find that the small band at Merrymount had barricaded themselves within a small building. Morton eventually decided to attack the men from Plymouth, but the Merrymount group were too drunk to handle their weapons.[56] Morton aimed a weapon at Standish, which the captain purportedly ripped from his hands. Standish and his men took Morton to Plymouth and eventually sent him back to England. Later, Morton wrote the book New English Canaan, in which he referred to Myles Standish as "Captain Shrimp," and wrote, "I have found the Massachusetts Indians more full of humanity than the Christians."[57]

Penobscot expedition

Standish's last significant expedition was against the French, having defended Plymouth from Native Americans and Englishmen.[58] The French established a trading post in 1613 on the Penobscot River in what is now Castine, Maine. English forces captured the settlement in 1628 and turned it over to Plymouth Colony. It was a valuable source of furs and timber for the Pilgrims for seven years. However, in 1635, the French mounted a small expedition and easily reclaimed the settlement.[59] William Bradford ordered Captain Standish to take action, determined that the post be reclaimed in Plymouth Colony's name. This was a significantly larger proposition than the small expeditions which Standish had previously led and, to accomplish the task, he chartered the ship Good Hope captained by a man named Girling.[59] Standish's plan appears to have been to bring the Good Hope within cannon range of the trading post and to bombard the French into surrender. Unfortunately, Girling ordered the bombardment before the ship was within range and quickly spent all the gunpowder on board. Standish gave up the effort.[59]

By this time, the neighboring and more populous Massachusetts Bay Colony had been established. Bradford appealed to leaders of the colony in Boston for help in reclaiming the trading post, but the Bay Colony refused. The incident was indicative of the rivalry which persisted between Plymouth and Massachusetts Bay colonies.[59] In 1691, the two colonies merged to become the royal Province of Massachusetts Bay.

Settlement in Duxbury

In 1625, Plymouth Colony leaders appointed Standish to travel to London to negotiate new terms with the Merchant Adventurers. If a settlement could be reached and the Pilgrims could pay off their debt to the Adventurers, then the colonists would have new rights to allot land and settle where they pleased. Standish was not successful in his negotiations and returned to Plymouth in April 1626.[60] Another effort was successful later in 1626, this time negotiated by Isaac Allerton, and several leading men of Plymouth, including Standish, paid off the colony's debt to the Adventurers.[61]

The leaders of Plymouth Colony were now free of the directives of the Merchant Adventurers, and they exerted their new-found autonomy by organizing a land division in 1627. Large farm lots were parceled out to each family in the colony along the shore of the present-day towns of Plymouth, Kingston, Duxbury, and Marshfield, Massachusetts. Standish received a farm of 120 acres (49 ha) in what became Duxbury.[62] He built a house and settled there around 1628.[63]

There are indications that Standish began to seek a quieter life by 1635 (after the Penobscot expedition), maintaining the livestock and fields of his Duxbury farm.[64] He was about 51 years old at that time, and he began to relinquish the responsibility of defending the colony to a younger generation. A note in the colony records of 1635 indicates that Lieutenant William Holmes was appointed to train the militia as Standish's immediate subordinate.[65] When the Pequot War loomed in 1637, Standish was appointed to a committee to raise a company of 30 men, but it was Holmes who led the company in the field.[65]

The families living in Duxbury (sometimes "Duxborough") asked to be set off from Plymouth as a separate town with their own church and minister; this request was granted in 1637. Historian Justin Winsor and others have insisted that the name of Duxbury was given by Standish in honor of Duxbury Hall, near Chorley in Lancashire, which was owned by a branch of the Standish family.[66] The coincidence would suggest that he had something to do with it, though no records exist to indicate how the town was named.[67]

Last years

During the 1640s, Standish took on an increasingly administrative role. He served as a surveyor of highways, as Treasurer of the Colony from 1644 to 1649, and on various committees to lay out boundaries of new towns and inspect waterways.[68] His old friend Hobbamock had been part of his household, but he died in 1642 and was buried on Standish's farm in Duxbury.[37]

Standish died on October 3, 1656 of "strangullion" or strangury, a condition often associated with kidney stones or bladder cancer.[13] He was buried in Duxbury's Old Burying Ground, now known as the Myles Standish Cemetery.[69]

Marriages and family

Myles Standish married:

- Rose Handley (1601–21) by 1618. She died on January 29, 1621.[70] She was buried in an unmarked grave at Coles Hill Burial Ground in Plymouth, as were many others who died the first winter. She is named on the Pilgrim Memorial Tomb on Cole's Hill as "Rose, first wife of Myles Standish".
- Barbara Mullins [71] by 1624. She had come to Plymouth in 1623 on either the Anne or Little James and they were married the following spring. Historians have suggested that she may have been a sister of Standish's first wife Rose, and that he specifically sent for her. They had seven children. She died after October 6, 1659 and her burial place is unknown. [72]

Children of Myles and Barbara Standish:

1. Charles (1) was born in 1624. He died between May 22, 1627 and 1635.
2. Alexander was born about 1626 and died July 6, 1702. He was buried in Myles Standish Burying Ground in Duxbury, Massachusetts. He married Sarah Alden by 1660 and had eight children. She died before June 13, 1688. Her father was Mayflower passenger John Alden. He then married Desire (Doty) (Sherman) Holmes by 1689 and had three children. She died in Marshfield on January 22, 1731. Her father was Mayflower passenger Edward Doty.

3. John was born about 1627. No further record exists.
4. Myles was born about 1629 and died at sea after March 20, 1661. His body was lost at sea. He married Sarah Winslow in Boston on July 19, 1660, but there is no record of children.
5. Loara (Lora) was born about 1631 and died by March 7, 1655/6. She was unmarried.
6. Josiah was born about 1633 and died in Preston, Connecticut on March 19, 1690. His burial place is unknown. He married Mary Dingley in Marshfield on December 19, 1654, who died in Duxbury on July 1, 1655. He married Sarah Allen after 1655 and had eight children. She died after September 16, 1690.
7. Charles (2) was born by about 1635. He was still living on March 7, 1655/6. No further record exists.[71][73]

Legacy

Standish's true-life role in defending Plymouth Colony and the sometimes brutal tactics that he employed were largely obscured by the fictionalized character created by Henry Wadsworth Longfellow in his narrative poem The Courtship of Miles Standish. Historian Tudor Jenks wrote that Longfellow's book had "no claim to be considered other than a pleasant little fairystory, and as an entirely misleading sketch of men and matters in old Plymouth."[74] However, the book elevated Standish to the level of folk hero in Victorian America. In late 19th century Duxbury, the book generated a movement to build monuments in Standish's honor, a beneficial by-product of which was increased tourism to the town.[11]

The first of these monuments was the largest.[11] The cornerstone was laid for the Myles Standish Monument in Duxbury in 1872, with a crowd of ten thousand people attending the ceremonies.[11] It was finished in 1898, the third tallest monument to an individual in the United States. It is surpassed only by the first dedicated Washington Monument (178 feet) in Baltimore, Maryland (finished in 1829) and the Washington Monument (555 feet) in Washington, D.C. (dedicated in 1885).[11] The top of the monument is 116 feet (35 m) overall, and at the top stands a 14-foot (4.3 m) statue of Standish.[11]

A second, smaller monument was placed over the alleged site of Myles Standish's grave in 1893.[69] Two exhumations of Standish's remains were undertaken in 1889 and 1891 to determine the location of the Captain's resting place. A third exhumation took place in 1930 to place Standish's remains in a hermetically sealed chamber beneath the grave-site monument.[69] His burial site is located in Myles Standish Burial Ground in Duxbury.[75]

The site of Myles Standish's house reveals only a slight depression in the ground where the cellar hole was, but it is now a small park owned and maintained by the town of Duxbury.[76]

Standish, Maine[77] is named for the Captain, as well as the neighborhood of Standish, Minneapolis. At least two forts were named after Standish: an earthen fort on Plymouth's Saquish Neck built during the American Civil War, and a larger cement fort built on Lovells Island in Boston Harbor in 1895. Both forts are now abandoned.[78] Camp Myles Standish in nearby Taunton was also named for Standish.[79]

Myles Standish State Forest is located in the towns of Plymouth and Carver in southeastern Massachusetts, approximately 45 miles (70 km) south of Boston. It is the largest publicly owned recreation area in this part of Massachusetts, and is managed by the Department of Conservation and Recreation (DCR).[80]

Myles Standish Hall is a dormitory at Boston University, originally constructed as the Myles Standish Hotel in 1925 and named in his honor.[81] which was to be abated if Squire made a public apology [MCR 1:33; MCF Folio 8].

Thomas Squire may have resided briefly in Boston, based on his deed of 1659, or he may have been called of Boston at that time merely because that was the location of the land.

HUGH STACY

"Hugh Statie" appears in the 1623 Plymouth division of land, receiving one acre as a passenger on the Fortune in 1621 [PCR 12:5].

In his account of his adventures in early 1623, Phineas Pratt, having just reached the safety of Plymouth, reported that "the next day a young [mutilated] named Hugh Stacye went forth to fell a tree" [MHSC 4:4:484].

COMMENTS: This name does not appear in the 1627 Plymouth division of cattle. A Hugh Stacy appears in Salem in 1639, and soon moves to Dedham; most previous writers have assumed that this man is identical with the Plymouth man, but the long lapse of time without any intervening record makes this highly unlikely.

MILES STANDISH

ORIGIN: Holland
MIGRATION: 1620 on Mayflower
FIRST RESIDENCE: Plymouth
REMOVES: Duxbury
RETURN TRIPS: Sent to London in late 1625 and returned early 1626

OCCUPATION: Soldier.
FREEMAN: In the "1633" Plymouth list of freemen Capt[ain] Myles Standish is first among the councillors, immediately after the governor [PCR 1:3]. In 7 March 1636/7 list of freemen [PCR 1:52]. In 1639 list of freemen, among Assistants and in Duxbury section [PCR 8:173, 174].
EDUCATION: He signed several documents sent to the Bay and must have been conversant with figures to be colony treasurer. His inventory included several dozen books, valued at £9 3s.; although there were three Bibles and a number of other theological volumes, Standish also owned such titles as Homer's Iliad and Caesar's Commentaries.
OFFICES: Assistant, 1 January 1632/3, 1635, 1637-41, 1645-56 [MA Civil List 36-38; PCR 1:5, 32, 48, 79, 116, 140, 2:8, 15, 83, 115, 123, 166, 3:7, 30, 48, 77, 99]. Deputy Governor [PCR 3:27]. Treasurer, 1644-56 [MA Civil List 36; PCR 2:76, 101, 115, 123, 166, 3:7, 30, 48, 77]. Council of War [PCR 2:47, 64, 100, 3:26, 28].

"Capt. Standish" is in the Duxbury section of the 1643 Plymouth Colony list of men able to bear arms [PCR 8:190].

Captain, 1620-56 [PCR 1:52, 59, 80, 82, 84, 90-92, 98, 100]. Commander of forces [PCR 2:47, 146]. Captain of troops raised for Dutch war [PCR 3:29, 55]

ESTATE: In the 1623 Plymouth division of land "Captin Myles Standish" received two acres as a passenger on the Mayflower [for himself and his first wife, Rose], and "Mrs. Standish" received one acre as a passenger on the Anne in 1623 [PCR 12:4, 6]. In the 1627 Plymouth division of cattle Captain Standish, Barbara Standish, Charles Standish, Alexander Standish and John Standish are the first five persons in the third company [PCR 12:10].

In 1631 "Captain Myles Standish of Plymouth" sold to Edward Winslow of Plymouth "two acres of land lying in the north field" [PCR 12:16].

In the Plymouth tax lists of 25 March 1633 and 27 March 1634 Capt[ain] Myles Standish was assessed 18s. [PCR 1:9, 27]. He was one of the purchasers [PCR 2:177].

On 1 July 1633 through 20 March 1636/7 Captain Standish was allowed to mow land he had formerly mowed [PCR 1:14, 40, 56]. On 4 December 1637 Captain Myles Standish was granted the surplusage of land on "Ducksborrow side" in consideration of the "want of lands he should have had to his proportion [PCR 1:70]. On 2 July 1638 Captain Myles Standish received three hundred acres of uplands [PCR 1:91]. On 1 October 1638 he was granted a garden place at Duxborrow side, which was formerly laid forth for him [PCR 1:99]. On 4 March 1650/1 "whereas Captain Miles Standish hath been at much trouble and pains, and hath gone sundry journeys into Yarmouth aforesaid in the said town's business, and likely to have more in that behalf, in respect whereunto the Court have granted unto the said Captain Standish" about forty or fifty acres [PCR 2:164].

On 9 May 1654 "Capt. Myles Standish" sold to Capt. Thomas Willett of Plymouth his purchaser's right at Sowamsett, Mattapoisett and places adjacent; "Mrs. Barberye Standish wife of the said Capt. Standish" consented to his deed [MD 6:246-47, citing PCLR 2:1:111].

In his will, dated 7 March 1655[/6] and proved 4 May 1657, "Myles Standish Senior of Duxburrow" asked that "if I die at Duxburrow my body to be laid as near as conveniently may be to my two daughters Lora Standish my daughter and Mary Standish my daughter-in-law" and bequeathed to "my dear and loving wife Barbara Standish" one-third of his estate after all debts are paid; to "my son Josias Standish upon his marriage" cattle to the value of £40 (if possible), and "that every one of my four sons viz: Allexander Standish, Myles Standish, Josias Standish and Charles Standish may have forty pounds apiece," to "my eldest son Allexaner ... a double share in land," and "so long as they live single that the whole be in partnership betwixt them"; "my dearly beloved wife Barbara Standish, Allexander Standish, Myles Standish and Josias Standish" to be joint executors; "my loving friends Mr. Timothy Hatherley and Capt. James Cudworth" to be supervisors; to "Marcye Robinson whom I tenderly love for her grandfather's sake" £3; to "my servant John Irish Jr." 40s. beyond what is due him by covenant; and to "my son & heir apparent Allexander Standish all my lands as heir apparent by lawful descent in Ormistick, Borsconge, Wrightington, Maudsley, Newburrow, Crawston and the Isle of Man and given to me as right heir by lawful descent but surruptuously [sic] detained from me my great-grandfather being a second or younger brother from the house of Standish of Standish" [MD 3:153-55, citing PCPR 2:1:37-38].

The inventory of the estate of "Captain Miles Standish gent.," taken 2 December 1656, totalled £358 7s., including "one dwelling house and outhouses with the land thereunto belonging" valued at £140 [MD 3:155-56, citing PCPR 2:1:39-40].

On 4 May 1657 "Mr. Allexander Standish and Mr. Josias Standish do accept of being executors with Mrs. Barbery Standish, their mother, on the estate of Captain Myles Standish, deceased" [PCR 3:114].

On 5 October 1658 confirmation was made of a sale by "Capt. Myles Standish" (with consent of his wife Barbara) to Mr. Thomas Howes of Yarmouth of "a certain farm lying in the liberties of Yarmouth," which had been granted to Standish by the court on 4 March 1650 [MD 13:142-43, citing PCLR 2:2:11].

BIRTH: By about 1593 based on date of first marriage.
DEATH: Duxbury 3 October 1656 [MD 1:12-13 (and especially footnote on page 12); NEHGR 87:152].
MARRIAGE: (1) By say 1618 Rose _____. She died Plymouth 29 January 1620/1 ("January 29 [1620/1]. Dies Rose, the wife of Captain Standish" [Prince 184]).

(2) By 1624 Barbara _____. She died after 6 October 1659 [MD 4:119].

COMMENTS: Bradford listed "Captin Myles Standish and Rose his wife" as passengers on the Mayflower [Bradford 442]. In 1651 Bradford stated that "Captain Standish his wife died in the first sickness and he married again and hath four sons living and some are dead" [Bradford 445].

Although we have been left with THOMAS MORTON's description of Standish as "Captain Shrimp," Bradford described him in gentler terms during the first great sickness:

> so as there died sometimes two or three of a day ... that of one hundred & odd persons, scarce fifty remained. And of these in the time of most distress, there was but six or seven sound persons, who, to their great commendations be it spoken, spared no pains, night nor day, but with abundance of toil and hazard of their own health ... did all the homely & necessary offices for them, which dainty & queazy stomachs cannot endure to hear named; and all this willingly & cheerfully, without any grudging in the least, showing herein their true love unto their friends & bretheren. A rare example & worthy to be remembered. Two of these seven were Mr. William Brewster, their Reverend Elder, & Myles Standish, their Captain & military commander, unto whom myself & many others, were much beholden in our low & sick condition" [Bradford 77].

Standish also had a facility with language, but one editor remarked that "Standish, though 'the best linguist among them,' in the Indian dialects, was more expert with the sword than the pen" [Young's Pilgrim Fathers 115].

Lyford and Oldham, in their derogatory letters to England about the early settlement at Plymouth, said "Captain Standish looks like a silly boy, and is in utter contempt" [Bradford 156].

In a 1623 trip to the area near what would be Boston, Captain Standish warned the men there of the Indians' violent intentions. When a number arrived to trade, Standish boldly faced them down and averted a skirmish, but not without suffering some personal slights:

"Also Pecksuot, being a man of greater stature than the Captain, told him, though he were a great captain, yet he was but a little man; and, said he, though I be no sachim, yet I am a man of great strength and courage. These things the Captain observed, yet bare with patience for the present" [Young's Pilgrim Fathers 338].

He was one of those who made the voyage of discovery in December 1620 along the coast [Young's Pilgrim Fathers 149-162]. He left his tools in the woods and they were stolen by the "savages" [Young's Pilgrim Fathers 180].

On 22 March 1620/1 Captain Standish and Master Williamson met Massassoit at the brook and began negotiations, soon joined by the governor [Young's Pilgrim Fathers 192-93].

In the winter of 1622, Captain Standish was to go to the Bay, but was twice driven back by high winds, the latter time being sick with a "violent fever" [Young's Pilgrim Fathers 299-300]. The Governor took his place and the meeting occurred as intended. We are told that Standish recovered within the month [Young's Pilgrim Fathers 304].

In early 1623, Captain Standish went to trade with the Indians. On meeting some of greater number than his little band, he soon missed some beads, and taking his men "set them on their guard about the sachim's house ... threatening to fall upon them without further delay if they would not forthwith restore them, signifying ... that as he would not offer the least injury, so he would not receive any at their hands, which should escape without punishment or due satisfaction" [Young's Pilgrim Fathers 309]. This bold stance won respect as well as the return of the beads.

In a running conflict in spring of 1623, Standish and a small troop took the high ground and as one assailant drew his bow to fire at Standish, Standish and one other fired at him and broke his arm, "whereupon they fled into a swampe. When they were in the thicket, they parleyed, but to small purpose, getting nothing but foul language. So our Captain dared the sachim to come out and fight like a man, showing how base and woman-like he was in tonguing it as he did, but he refused, and fled" [Young's Pilgrim Fathers 341]. Johnson, with his usual hyperbole, described the scene:

> Now the Indians, whose dwellings are most near the waterside, appeared with their bows bent and arrows on the string, let fly their long shafts among this little company, whom they might soon have enclosed, but the Lord otherwise disposed of it, for one Captaine Miles Standish having his fowling piece in a readiness, presented full at them, his shot being directed by the provident Hand of the most high God, struck the stoutest sachem among them on the right arm, it being bent over his shoulder to reach an arrow forth his quiver, as their manner is to draw them forth in fight. At this stroke they all fled with great swiftness [WWP 42].

In late 1625 Captain Standish was sent to England with letters and instructions > both to their friends of the company ... and also the Honorable Council of New England to the company to desire that seeing that they meant only to let them have goods upon sale, that they might have them upon easier terms, for they should never be able to bear such high interest ... But he came in a very bad time, for the State was full of trouble, and the plague very hot in London, so as no business could be done, yet he spake with some of the Honored Council, who promised all helpfulnes to the plantation which lay in them ... yet with much ado he took up £150 (& spent a good deal of it in expences) at 50 per cent, which he bestowed in trading goods & such other most needful commodities as he knew requisite for their use, and so returned passenger in a fishing ship [Bradford 177-79].

In 1628, Captain Standish was sent to capture Morton by force. Coming upon Morton's dwelling, Standish found him to be well armed and locked within. Fortunately, they were "over armed with drink" and, coming out of the house > they were so steeled with drink as their pieces were too heavy for them, [Morton] ... with a carbine ... had thought to have shot Captain Standish; but he [Standish] stepped to him, & put by his piece, & took him. Neither was there any hurt done to any of either side, save that one was so drunk that he ran his own nose upon the point of a sword that one held before him as he entered the house; but he lost but a little of his hot blood [Bradford 209-10].

In 1634 when Mr. Alden was imprisoned in the Massachusetts Bay, Captain Standish was sent to free him [Bradford 264-65].

BIBLIOGRAPHIC NOTE: The last clause of the will of Miles Standish, in which he complains of being "surruptuously detained" from his rightful inheritance, and then lists a number of estates, has spawned a great amount of research into the origins of this immigrant.

In 1914 Thomas Cruddas Porteus published "Some Recent Investigations Concerning the Ancestry of Capt. Myles Standish" [NEHGR 68:339-69]. He transcribed many estate documents, and came to the tentative conclusion that Miles Standish descended from a certain Huan Standish of the Isle of Man.

In 1933 Merton Taylor Goodrich prepared a study of "The Children and Grandchildren of Capt. Myles Standish" [NEHGR 87:149-60]. Goodrich touches only briefly on the matter of the Standish ancestry; the most important part of his article is a careful study of both wives and each of the children of Miles Standish, dealing in detail with a number of matters of chronology and proof. This article is the bedrock on which all later work is based.

More recently G.V.C. Young has tackled the problem of the ancestry of Miles Standish and has advanced our knowledge greatly. In 1984 he presented an extended argument that Miles Standish was born on the Isle of Man, and that he was the son of a John Standish of Ellanbane on the Isle of Man [Myles Standish: First Manx American (Isle of Man 1984)]. This John Standish was son of another John Standish, who was son of a Huan Standish of Ellanbane, the very man proposed by Porteus in 1914. Although this conclusion is very well argued, the proof is not yet complete, although Young's identification is highly probable.

Young has published two brief supplements to this work: More About Pilgrim Myles Standish (Isle of Man 1987) and Ellanbane Was the Birthplace of Myles Standish (Isle of Man 1988).

“Myles Standish” from Encyclopædia Britannica published at https://www.britannica.com

Myles Standish, Myles also spelled Miles (born c. 1584, Lancashire, Eng.—died Oct. 3, 1656, Duxbury, Mass.), British-American colonist and military leader of the Plymouth colony.

As a young man, Standish fought in the Netherlands, where he probably met the English religious exiles who later became known as the Pilgrims. He sailed with them to America on the “Mayflower” in 1620, serving as their military leader when they established Plymouth in New England. He learned the language of the local Indians and led several expeditions against hostile tribes. In 1627 he was a leader of the group in the colony that bought out the London investors. In 1628 Standish helped to break up the colony of Thomas Morton at nearby Merry Mount when it proved too unpuritanical to suit Plymouth. He also served as assistant governor and as treasurer of the Plymouth colony (1644–49). He moved to Duxbury in 1631 and remained there until his death.

There is no historical evidence for the story that he asked John Alden to propose marriage for him to Priscilla Mullins, as told in Longfellow’s poem The Courtship of Miles Standish.

ESTATE: In the 1623 Plymouth division of land "Captin Myles Standish" received two acres as a passenger on the Mayflower [for himself and his first wife, Rose], and "Mrs. Standish" received one acre as a passenger on the Anne in 1623 [PCR 12:4, 6]. In the 1627 Plymouth division of cattle Captain Standish, Barbara Standish, Charles Standish, Alexander Standish and John Standish are the first five persons in the third company [PCR 12:10].

In 1631 "Captain Myles Standish of Plymouth" sold to Edward Winslow of Plymouth "two acres of land lying in the north field" [PCR 12: 16].

In the Plymouth tax lists of 25 March 1633 and 27 March 1634 Capt[ain] Myles Standish was assessed 18s. [PCR 1:9, 27]. He was one of the purchasers [PCR 2: 177].

On 1 July 1633 through 20 March 1636/7 Captain Standish was allowed to mow land he had formerly mowed [PCR 1:14, 40, 56]. On 4 December 1637 Captain Myles Standish was granted the surplusage of land on "Ducksborrow side" in consideration of the "want of lands he should have had to his proportion [PCR 1:70]. On 2 July 1638 Captain Myles Standish received three hundred acres of uplands [PCR 1:91]. On 1 October 1638 he was granted a garden place at Duxborrow side, which was formerly laid forth for him [PCR 1 :99]. On 4 March 1650/1 "whereas Captain Miles Standish hath been at much trouble and pains, and hath gone sundry journeys into Yarmouth aforesaid in the said town's business, and likely to have more in that behalf, in respect whereunto the Court have granted unto the said Captain Standish" about forty or fifty acres [PCR 2:164].

On 9 May 1654 "Capt. Myles Standish" sold to Capt. Thomas Willett of Plymouth his purchaser's right at Sowamsett, Mattapoisett and places adjacent; "Mrs. Barberye Standish wife of the said Capt. Standish" consented to his deed [MD 6:246-47, citing PCLR 2:1:111].

In his will, dated 7 March 1655[/6] and proved 4 May 1657, "Myles Standish Senior of Duxburrow" asked that "if I die at Duxburrow my body to be laid as near as conveniently may be to my two daughters Lora Standish my daughter and Mary Standish my daughter-in-law" and bequeathed to "my dear and loving wife Barbara Standish" one-third of his estate after all debts are paid; to "my son Josias Standish upon his marriage" cattle to the value of £40 (if possible), and "that every one of my four sons viz: Allexander Standish, Myles Standish, Josias Standish and Charles Standish may have forty pounds apiece," to "my eldest son Allexaner ... a double share in land," and "so long as they live single that the whole be in partnership betwixt them"; "my dearly beloved wife Barbara Standish, Allexander Standish, Myles Standish and Josias Standish" to be joint executors; "my loving friends Mr. Timothy Hatherley and Capt. James Cudworth" to be supervisors; to "Marcye Robinson whom I tenderly love for her grandfather's sake" £3; to "my servant John Irish Jr." 40s. beyond what is due him by covenant; and to "my son & heir apparent Allexander Standish all my lands as heir apparent by lawful descent in Ormistick, Borsconge, Wrightington, Maudsley, Newburrow, Crawston and the Isle of Man and given to me as right heir by lawful descent but surruptuously [sic] detained from me my great-grandfather being a second or younger brother from the house of Standish of Standish" [MD 3:153-55, citing PCPR 2:1:37-38].

The inventory of the estate of "Captain Miles Standish gent.," taken 2 December 1656, totalled £358 7s., including "one dwelling house and outhouses with the land thereunto belonging" valued at £140 [MD 3:155-56, citing PCPR 2:1 :39-40].

On 4 May 1657 "Mr. Allexander Standish and Mr. Josias Standish do accept of being executors with Mrs. Barbery Standish, their mother, on the estate of Captain Myles Standish, deceased" [PCR 3: 114].

On 5 October 1658 confirmation was made of a sale by "Capt. Myles Standish" (with consent of his wife Barbara) to Mr. Thomas Howes of Yarmouth of "a certain farm lying in the liberties of Yarmouth," which had been granted to Standish by the court on 4 March 1650 [MD 13:142- 43, citing PCLR 2:2:11].

BIRTH: By about 1593 based on date of first marriage.

DEATH: Duxbury 3 October 1656 [MD 1: 12-13 (and especially footnote on page 12); NEHGR 87:152].

MARRIAGE: (1) By say 1618 Rose __ . She died Plymouth 29 January 1620/1 ("January 29 [1620/1]. Dies Rose, the wife of Captain Standish" [Prince 184])(2) By 1624 Barbara __ . She died after 6 October 1659 [MD 4:119]..

CHILDREN:

i. CHARLES, b. say 1624; living 1627; d. by about 1635.

ii. ALEXANDER, b. say 1626 (died 6 July 1702 "being about 76 years of age" [NEHGR 87:153]); m. (1) by about 1660 Sarah Alden, daughter of JOHN ALDEN; m. (2) by 1689 as her third husband Desire (Doty) (Sherman) Holmes, daughter of EDWARD DOTY [PM 177].

iii. JOHN, b. say 1627; no further record.

iv. MYLES, b. say 1629; m. Boston 19 July 1660 Sarah Winslow, daughter of JOHN WINSLOW [PM 511; BVR 76].

v. LORA, b. say 1631; d. by 7 March 1655[/6], unm. (from father's will).

vi. JOSIAS, b. say 1633; m. (1) Marshfield 19 December 1654 Mary Dingley [MarVR l]; m. (2) after 1655 Sarah Allen, daughter of Samuel Allen (in his will of 2 August 1669 Samuel Allen bequeathed to "my son-in-law Josiah Standish" [SPR 6:27]).

vii. CHARLES, b. say 1635; living 7 March 1655[/6] (named in father's will); no further record.

COMMENTS: Bradford listed "Captin Myles Standish and Rose his wife" as passengers on the Mayflower [Bradford 442]. In 1651 Bradford stated that "Captain Standish his wife died in the first sickness and he married again and hath four sons living and some are dead" [Bradford 445].

Standish was a leader of the first and third discovery expeditions on Cape Cod in November and December 1620 [Mourt 19-24, 32-37]. On 22 March 1620/1, Captain Standish and Master Williamson [William Brewster] met Massassoit at the brook and began negotiations, soon joined by the governor [Mourt 55-57].

Although we have been left with THOMAS MORTON's description of Standish as "Captain Shrimp," Bradford described him in gentler terms during the first great sickness: “so as there died sometimes two or three of a day ... that of one hundred & odd persons, scarce fifty remained. And of these in the time of most distress, there was but six or seven sound persons, who, to their great commendations be it spoken, spared no pains, night nor day, but with abundance of toil and hazard of their own health ... did all the homely & necessary offices for them, which dainty & queazy stomachs cannot endure to hear named; and all this willingly & cheerfully, without any grudging in the least, showing herein their true love unto their friends & bretheren. A rare example & worthy to be remembered. Two of these seven were Mr. William Brewster, their Reverend Elder, & Myles Standish, their Captain & military commander, unto whom myself & many others, were much beholden in our low & sick condition” [Bradford 77].

In the winter of 1622, Captain Standish was to go to the Bay, but was twice driven back by high winds, the latter time being sick with a "violent fever" [Good News 299-300]. The Governor took his place and the meeting occurred as intended; Standish recovered within the month [Good News 304].

Lyford and Oldham, in their derogatory letters to England about the early settlement at Plymouth, said "Captain Standish looks like a silly boy, and is in utter contempt" [Bradford 156]. Standish also had a facility with language, but one editor remarked that "Standish, though 'the best linguist among them,' in the Indian dialects, was more expert with the sword than the pen" [Young's Pilgrim Fathers 115].

In early 1623, Captain Standish went to trade with the Indians. On meeting some of greater number than his little band, he soon missed some beads, and taking his men "set them on their guard about the sachem's house ... threatening to fall upon them without further delay if they would not forthwith restore them, signifying ... that as he would not offer the least injury, so he would not receive any at their hands, which should escape without punishment or due satisfaction" [Good News 309]. This bold stance won respect as well as the return of the beads.

In a 1623 trip to the area near what would be Boston, Captain Standish warned the men there of the Indians' violent intentions. When a number arrived to trade, Standish boldly faced them down and averted a skirmish, but not without suffering some personal slights: "Also Pecksuot, being a man of greater stature than the Captain, told him, though he were a great captain, yet he was but a little man; and, said he, though I be no sachim, yet I am a man of great strength and courage. These things the Captain observed, yet bare with patience for the present" [Good News 338].

In a running conflict in spring of 1623, Standish and a small troop took the high ground and as one assailant drew his bow to fire at Standish, Standish and one other fired at him and broke his arm, "whereupon they fled into a swampe. When they were in the thicket, they parleyed, but to small purpose, getting nothing but foul language. So our Captain dared the sachim to come out and fight like a man, showing how base and woman-like he was in tonguing it as he did, but he refused, and fled" [Good News 341].

In late 1625 Captain Standish was sent to England with letters and instructions “both to their friends of the company ... and also the Honorable Council of New England to the company to desire that seeing that they meant only to let them have goods upon sale, that they might have them upon easier terms, for they should never be able to bear such high interest ... But he came in a very bad time, for the State was full of trouble, and the plague very hot in London, so as no business could be done, yet he spake with some of the Honored Council, who promised all helpfulnes to the plantation which lay in them ... yet with much ado he took up £150 (& spent a good deal of it in expences) at 50 per cent, which he bestowed in trading goods & such other most needful commodities as he knew requisite for their use, and so returned passenger in a fishing ship” [Bradford 177-79].

In 1628, Captain Standish was sent to capture Morton by force. Coming upon Morton's dwelling, Standish found him to be well armed and locked within. Fortunately, they were "over armed with drink" and, coming out of the house “they were so steeled with drink as their pieces were too heavy for them, [Morton] ... with a carbine ... had thought to have shot Captain Standish; but he [Standish] stepped to him, & put by his piece, & took him. Neither was there any hurt done to any of either side, save that one was so drunk that he ran his own nose upon the point of a sword that one held before him as he entered the house; but he lost but a little of his hot blood” [Bradford 209-10].

In 1634 when Mr. Alden was imprisoned in the Massachusetts Bay, Captain Standish was sent to free him [Bradford 264-65].

BIBLIOGRAPHIC NOTE: The last clause of the will of Miles Standish, in which he complains of being "surruptuously detained" from his rightful inheritance, and then lists a number of estates, has spawned a great amount of research into the origins of this immigrant.

In 1914 Thomas Cruddas Porteus published "Some Recent Investigations Concerning the Ancestry of Capt. Myles Standish" [NEHGR 68:339-69]. He transcribed many estate documents, and came to the tentative conclusion that Miles Standish descended from a certain Ruan Standish of the Isle of Man.

In 1933 Merton Taylor Goodrich prepared a study of "The Children and Grandchildren of Capt. Myles Standish" [NEHGR 87:149-60]. Goodrich touches only briefly on the matter of the Standish ancestry; the most important part of his article is a careful study of both wives and each of the children of Miles Standish, dealing in detail with a number of matters of chronology and proof. This article is the bedrock on which all later work is based.

More recently G.V.C. Young has tackled the problem of the ancestry of Miles Standish and has advanced our knowledge greatly. In 1984 he presented an extended argument that Miles Standish was born on the Isle of Man, and that he was the son of a John Standish of Ellanbane on the Isle of Man [Myles Standish: First Manx American (Isle of Man 1984)]. This John Standish was son of another John Standish, who was son of a Huan Standish of Ellanbane, the very man proposed by Porteus in 1914. Although this conclusion is very well argued, the proof is not yet complete, although Young's identification is highly probable.

Young has published two brief supplements to this work: More About Pilgrim Myles Standish (Isle of Man 1987) and Ellanbane Was the Birthplace of Myles Standish (Isle of Man 1988).

THE CHILDREN AND GRANDCHILDREN OF CAPT. MYLES STANDISH

By MERTON TAYLOR GOODRICH, M.A., of Keene, N. H.

THE data upon which this article is based and the conclusions drawn therein are the result of researches made by the writer for Lieut. Col. Frederic Louis Huidekoper of Washington, D. C., whose two children, Stuart Elliott Huidekoper and Frederic Fitz-James Christie Huidekoper, are descended on the maternal side from Capt. Myles Standish. Lieutenant Colonel Huidekoper, whose military writings have given him an international reputation because of their scope, accuracy, and thoroughness, was not satisfied with what had been published on the Standish family of America, and desired a more accurate and complete account of the families of Capt. Myles Standish and his son Alexander than had appeared in print. For these reasons the records concerning these families were assembled for him from many original sources, and the writer was led to make certain important deductions from them which have not before appeared in any publication. In order that the results of these researches may become available to others, Lieutenant Colonel Huidekoper has given his consent to their publication in this article; and to these data a similar study of the family of Josias Standish, the only other child of the Captain who left descendants, has been added.

I. PROBABLE ANCESTRY OF CAPT. MYLES STANDISH

The story of Capt. Myles Standish is one of mystery, romance, and adventure. The mystery begins with his parentage and origin. The concluding paragraph of his will, which was dated 7 Mar. 1655 [1655/6], reads as follows:

"9 I give unto my son & heire aparent Allexander Standish all my lands as heire apparent by lawfull Decent in Ormistick Borsconge Wrightington Maudsley, Newburrow, Crawston, and the Ile of man and given to mee as right heire by lawfull Decent but Surruptuously Detained from mee my great G(ran)dfather being a 2^{cond} or younger brother from the house of Standish of Standish"*

It is not within the scope of this article to give a detailed discussion of this mystery. Those interested will find the matter very carefully treated in an article entitled "Some Recent Investigations concerning the Ancestry of Capt. Myles Standish," by Rev. Thomas Cruddas Porteus, B.A., B.D., Vicar of St. John the Divine, Coppull, Lancashire, England, which was published in the REGISTER of October 1914 (vol. 68, pp. 339–370); in a later work by Mr. Porteus, "Captain Myles Standish: His Lost Lands and Lancashire Connections," Longmans, Green & Co., 1920; in a communication by Col. Charles Edward Banks, "The Standish Ancestors in England," published, in three instalments, as Note 2132 in the Genealogical Department of the Boston Evening Transcript for April 27, April 29, and May 4, 1925; and in "The English Ancestry and Homes of the Pilgrim Fathers," by Colonel Banks, The Grafton Press, New York, 1929.

*The will is recorded in Plymouth Colony Wills and Inventories, vol. 2, part 1, pp. 37 et seq., and is printed in The Mayflower Descendant, vol. 3, pp. 153–155, in the REGISTER, vol. 5, pp. 335–336, and in The Standishes of America, by the late Myles Standish, A.M., M.D., S.D., Boston, 1895, pp. 5–7.

These works prove clearly that when Capt. Myles Standish wrote that strange clause, he did not refer to land that had ever been owned by the Standish family of Standish or by the Standish family of Duxbury Hall, but to land that had been owned by the Standish family of Ormskirk. The last-named family branched off from the family of Standish of Standish in very ancient times, and it is only in this remote way that Capt. Myles Standish belonged to that house. From records of deeds, mortgages, rentals, and other legal processes, it appears that these lands came into the possession of the family of Standish of Ormskirk long after this branch had become distinct from the other two. In 1540, because of financial difficulties, one Thomas Standish appointed a board of trustees to control this property, and, if Thomas had no heirs, it was finally to revert to a younger brother, Huan Standish. Thomas had no heirs, but the trustees sold the property, and in this way Huan was prevented from inheriting it. It is probable that this Huan Standish was the great-grandfather of Capt. Myles Standish.

Those who have become accustomed to associating the pedigrees of the Lancashire branches of the family with the immediate ancestry of the Captain will naturally raise the objection that Thomas and Huan Standish lived on the Isle of Man. There is no documentary evidence that Capt. Myles was born in Lancashire. The parish records of the baptisms of the children in the families of Standish of Standish about the time of his birth are clear and complete. Both Mr. Porteus and Colonel Banks examined the parish register at Chorley, which contains the baptisms of the Standish family of Duxbury. This is the register which some authorities say has been tampered with, the story being due to the report of Mr. I. W. R. Bromley, a lawyer employed in 1846 to establish the claim of the Standish family to these lost lands. The impartiality and skill of Mr. Porteus and Colonel Banks cannot be questioned. They made their examinations independently, and each reports that, although certain entries are illegible, there is no evidence to show that this condition was brought about intentionally. Says Colonel Banks in his note in the Boston Transcript: "If this parish register has been tampered with (which I do not for a moment believe) then nearly every parchment register in England seen by me, perhaps a hundred in all, is subject to the same undigested criticism. Scarcely one exists that has not illegible folios, and it remained for a disappointed lawyer to raise this unmerited charge as an excuse for his failure to establish a hopeless case."

In the proof that Capt. Myles Standish did not come directly from Duxbury Hall or Standish, Lancashire, but one question remains. If he did not come from Duxbury, England, why was the name of the town in which he settled in New England called Duxbury? Mr. Porteus points out that there is no town of Duxbury in Lancashire, and that the name Duxbury Hall was not used until many years after the Mayflower sailed. Because the question was not decisively answered, however, the present writer ventures to add the following points. The act of incorporation of the town that is now called Duxbury reads as follows: "June 7, 1637. It is enacted by the Court that Ducksborrow shall become a towneship and unite together for their better securitie and to have the prveledges of a towne, onely their bounds & limmits shal be sett and appoynted by the next Court." The late Justin Winsor, in his "History of Duxbury" (p. 7), after quoting this passage, assumes that Duxbury received its name out of respect to Captain Standish from Duxbury Hall, the seat of the Standish family in England, but he gives no authority, not even a clue, for this assumption. He refers to the Lancashire Standish pedigree as if it were well enough established to prove his claim, and to disprove the assertion that the town was so named because it was the Captain's town. He admits, however, that the spelling of the name in all the old records is "Duxborough, Duxburrow, and sometimes Ducksburrow." In fact, these forms are used until long after 1700. In the Collections of the Massachusetts Historical Society, first series, vol. 2, pp. 3–4, is the statement: "Duxborough was incorporated 1637. In the records for thirty or forty years after the incorporation of the town, it was written Duxburrow. The probable etymology is Dux and borough or burrow, as it was then written. It being a grant to the Captain or Leader, it was called his borough." Then in reference to this point a footnote is added: "Many towns in Plymouth Colony are called after places in England from which the first settlers came. Though there is a town of this name in England, it is said that no persons who first came to Plymouth were from that place." This volume of the Collections was printed in 1793, and this footnote should settle the question definitely, when it is considered in connection with the other evidence here presented. The conclusion of the present writer is that the identity of the name Duxbury is a most singular coincidence, the natural inference from which was so strong that it led investigators to overlook such significant points as the fact that Capt. Myles Standish does not once mention Duxbury Hall in his will. Since Duxbury Hall was not so named until long after the Captain left England, and since Duxbury in the Plymouth Colony was originally incorporated as Duxborough and was officially so called for many years, it is really impossible that there should be any historical or family connections between the two places.

The names of the children of Capt. Myles Standish give the most probable clues to the names of his parents. There was an Alexander Standish who died in London in 1586. It has been stated by Colonel Banks in "The English Ancestry and Homes of the Pilgrim Fathers" that many of the Pilgrims were born in London. If this Alexander were the father of Myles, the latter would have been about two years old when his father died. This harmonizes with a tradition that Myles was born in London, was left an orphan, and, when he was a very young man, joined a company which went from London to fight in the Netherlands. It would be rash, however, to state definitely that he was born in London. The mystery of his parentage may never be solved.

II. The Wives and Children of Captain Standish

According to Professor Usher, Captain Standish was sent by the Merchant Adventurers with the Pilgrims in the Mayflower as their salaried servant. They paid his stipend, in order that he might defend the emigrants and teach them to defend themselves. (Porteus, Captain Myles Standish, p. 5.) With him came his first wife, Rose, who died "in the first sickness" (Bradford's History), 29 Jan. 1620/1; and Captain Standish married secondly, at Plymouth, between July 1623 and 24 Mar. 1623/4, Barbara ———, who died after 6 Oct. 1659. (Cf. The Mayflower Descendant, vol. 2, p. 119.) The second wife of Captain Standish had come over in the Anne, according to the original records of the division of land, 1623, which include the names of all sharing in this division who came over in the first three ships, the Mayflower, the Fortune, and the Anne, listed separately, according to the ships in which they came. Her name appears on this list as "Mrs. Standish" (ib., vol. 1, p. 230). This proves that she was married to Capt. Myles Standish not later than 1623.

In the division of cattle made 22 May 1627 "The third lot fell to Capt Standish & his companie Joyned to him his wife 2 Barbara Standish 3 Charles Standish 4 Allexander Standish 5 John Standish" and others to make up the number of thirteen persons who shared each lot of cattle. (Ib., vol. 1, pp. 149–150.) This statement shows who were members of the family of Capt. Myles Standish in May 1627. On the natural assumption that the children were named in the order of their births, it is easy to estimate from other known dates that Charles was born in 1624, Alexander in 1626, and John in 1627.

The last record of Barbara Standish is on 6 Oct. 1659, when in the inventory of the estate of Elizabeth Hopkins it is stated that some things remained in Gyles Hopkins's hand, "with a small matter in Mrs. Standishes hand." (Plymouth Colony Wills, vol. 1, pp. 90–91, quoted in The Mayflower Descendant, vol. 4, p. 119.)

In 1650, according to Governor Bradford's history, Captain Standish "hath 4 sones liveing, and some are dead;" and on the original manuscript containing this reading some one added, referring to the Captain: "who dyed. 3. of Octob. 1655." (The Mayflower Descendant, vol. 1, p. 13.) The correct date of Captain Standish's death is 3 Oct. 1656. The statement of Governor Bradford indicates positively that the only known daughter, Lora, and also more than one son had died before 1650.

In his will, dated 7 Mar. 1655 [1655/6] and exhibited before the Court at Plymouth 4 May 1657, Capt. Myles Standish names his sons Allexander (whom he calls "my eldest son," i. e., his eldest surviving son), Myles, Josias, and Charles, and makes his wife Barbara and his sons Allexander, Myles, and Josias "Joynt Exequitors."

The probability that the children were named in the order of birth and the omission of Charles from the list of executors show that this Charles was under twenty-one years of age and was therefore born after 7 Mar. 1634/5. This means that the first Charles died before the second was born. Governor Bradford's record shows that more than one son had died before 1650, and therefore John also died young. There is nothing to indicate that the second Charles ever married. By putting all these facts and deductions together a fairly definite picture of the family of Capt. Myles Standish is obtained.

Children by second wife:

i. CHARLES,[3] b. probably in 1624; d. probably between 1627 and 1634.
ii. ALEXANDER, b. in 1625 or 1626. See the account of his family given below.
iii. JOHN, b. in 1627; d., probably unm., before 1650.
iv. MYLES, b. probably in 1629; d. s. p. 5 Apr. 1663; m. 19 July 1660 SARAH WINSLOW, who d. in 1726, daughter of John and Mary (Chilton) Winslow. She m. (2) Tobias Paine; m. (3) Richard Middlecott. (The Standishes of America, p. 7.)
v. LORA, b. probably in 1631 but perhaps after 1634; d. before 1650.
vi. JOSIAS, b. probably in 1633. See the account of his family given below.
vii. CHARLES, b. after 1634; living in 1655; probably d. unm.

III. ALEXANDER[2] STANDISH AND HIS FAMILY

ALEXANDER[2] STANDISH, son of Capt. Myles Standish and his second wife, Barbara, was born at Plymouth in New England in 1625 or 1626, for, in addition to the records already cited, there is in the probate records of Plymouth County an original paper which is not in the published copy of these records but was discovered by Mr. George Ernest Bowman. This paper is a caveat or protest made by four of the daughters of Alexander Standish (by his first wife), who contested his will. Referring to the will, it reads: "he began it in Feb. last and end it ye 5 July last 1702 the day before he dyed, being about 76 years of age." This document also contains the statement: "by her [his second wife] he had two sons and one daughter." (The Mayflower Descendant, vol. 12, p. 99.) The complete will of Alexander Standish is given in the same article (pp. 100–102) and also the inventory of his property (p. 103). The article also contains this statement: "His first wife was Sarah Alden, dau. of John, but the date of their marriage, the dates on which their children were born, and the date of Sarah's death are unknown."

Alexander[2] Standish married first, therefore, SARAH ALDEN, daughter of John Alden; and secondly, in 1686 or 1687, DESIRE (DOTY) (SHERMAN) HOLMES, daughter of Edward and Faith (Clarke) Doty. The date of birth of Desire Doty, 1645, is computed from the fact that she was twenty-two years of age in 1667, when she signed her name plainly, "Desire Doty," as a witness to the marriage contract between her widowed mother, Faith Doty, and John Phillips, dated 23 Feb. 1666/7. (Deductions made from data in the Doty-Doten Family in America, by Ethan Allen Doty, 1897, p. 28.)

This genealogy (the Doty-Doten Family) quotes and corrects the account of the family of Edward Doty given by Savage in his

"Genealogical Dictionary of New England." The two authorities agree that there was a daughter Desire. The genealogy by Mr. Doty, page 28, states that under date of 10 July 1677 there appears on the record (what record is not stated) the following:

"Whereas there is about thirty shillings of the estate of Faith Phillips, deceased, lying in the custody of John Phillips her husband, it is agreed by and between the sonnes of the said Faith Phillips and with their joynt consent that the said sum shal be payed unto the daughters of the said Faith Phillips, viz: Desire Serman, Elizabeth Rouse and Mary Doten, in equall and alike proportions, unless the two younger sisters shall see reason in respect of the low condition of the eldest to consider her in that respect."

This "low condition of the eldest" is explained by the following facts. On the Christmas Day following the second marriage of her mother, Desire Doty married for her first husband William Sherman, who was born at Marshfield about 1644, the son of William and Prudence (Hill) Sherman. He suffered severely from his great exposure and his fighting experience in King Philip's War, and as a result, after his return, became afflicted with spells of insanity. He died in 1679, leaving his wife with six children. (Ib., p. 491.) This statement, however, should be modified to read: "leaving her with five children, and a sixth was born shortly after his death."

Widow Desire (Doty) Sherman married secondly, at Marshfield, 24 Nov. 1681, Israel Holmes, son of William and Elizabeth Holmes, who had married previously, in 1678, Anna Rouse, and had become a widower. He was drowned in Plymouth Harbor 24 Feb. 1684/5, while engaged in his occupation as a fisherman, and left Desire with two more children. (Ib., pp. 491–492.) Alexander Standish was her third husband. Although the date of her third marriage is not on record, other dates show that the marriage took place in 1686 or 1687. Mrs. Desire Standish lived happily with her third husband for many years, until his death, on 6 July 1702, at the old homestead in Duxbury. (The Mayflower Descendant, vol. 12, p. 99.) She bore to him three children. Her gravestone at Marshfield states that she died in January 1731, aged 86 years, an age which agrees with her date of birth, 1645, as previously determined. (Marshfield Vital Records and deductions from authorities cited above.) The preceding statements about Desire Standish are confirmed by her will, dated 30 July 1723 and proved 17 May 1732. (Plymouth Probate Records, vol. 6, pp. 177, 178, 180, cited in The Mayflower Descendant, vol. 12, pp. 48–52.) In the will she mentions her children, including Thomas and Ichabod Standish and her daughters, Experience Standish and Desire Weston. (Cf. also the REGISTER, vol. 52, pp. 362–365, and The Mayflower Descendant, vol. 23, p. 133.)

Children of Alexander[2] Standish by his first wife, Sarah Alden:

i. MYLES,[3] d. at Duxbury 15 Sept. 1739 (The Standishes of America, pp. 10–11); m. before (probably several years before) the death of his father, which occurred on 6 July 1702, EXPERIENCE SHERMAN, b. 22 Sept. 1678, d. 3 Mar. 1744 (MS. of the late Wesley Weyman, in the Library of the New England Historic Genealogical Society, the result of twenty-five years of labor on the descendants of Capt. Myles Standish, box 3, package 28), daughter of his stepmother by her first husband. That her maiden name was Sherman, not Holmes, is proved by the date of her birth. (Cf. Doty-Doten Family, pp. 29, 493.) His will, dated 31 Aug. 1739, was proved 20 Sept. 1739. (The Mayflower Descendant, vol. 23, p. 133.)

ii. LORA, living in 1725, when her husband made his will; m. ABRAHAM SAMPSON, b. about 1658, d. in 1727, aged "nearly 70 y.," son of Abraham Sampson. (Cf. Plymouth Probate Records, vol. 5, p. 477, and Sampson Memoirs, by John Adams Vinton, 1864, pp. 3, 7.)

iii. LYDIA, living 20 Mar. 1733/4, when she and her children released their claims on the estate of her son Josiah in favor of her son Ephraim (Plymouth Probate Records, vol. 7, pp. 67, 68, 69, quoted in Sampson Memoirs, p. 7); m. ISAAC SAMPSON, b. about 1660, d. 3 Sept. 1726, aged 66 years, son of Abraham Sampson. (Cf. Sampson Memoirs, p. 7.)

iv. ELIZABETH, m. in 1682/3 SAMUEL DELANO, b. at Duxbury in 1659, d. there in 1728, son of Phillippe De La Noyes (or Delanoy). (Cf. House of Delano, by J. A. Delano, p. 508.)

v. MERCY, m. CALEB SAMPSON, who was living as late as 9 July 1744, when he made a deed of gift to his son Caleb (Plymouth County Deeds, vol. 37, p. 5, quoted in The Mayflower Descendant, vol. 8, pp. 31–34), son of the Henry Sampson who came over in the Mayflower. There is no basis for the assumption that Henry and Abraham Sampson were brothers. Abraham arrived about ten years later than Henry.

vi. SARAH, b. about 1665/6; d. 4 Mar. 1740, "in her 74th year;" m. BENJAMIN SOULE, a son of John Soule by his first wife, Rebecca Simmons. This John Soule did not marry Esther Delano, as stated by Winsor, Davis, and others. That he married Rebecca Simmons is proved by a deed declaring that "Moses Simmons of Duxburrow . . . yeoman . . . in consideration of a marriage heretofore consumated between John Soule of Duxburrow aforesaid and my eldest daughter Rebeckah . . . " gives his son-in-law, John Soule, a lot of land, 30 Dec. 1674. (Cf. Simmons Family of Maine and Massachusetts, by Frederic J. Simmons, 1920 (a reprint from Sprague's Journal of Maine History, p. 9), and Old Colony Deeds, vol. 4, p. 64, quoted in Simmons Family, by Lorenzo Albert Simmons, 1930, p. 7.)

vii. EBENEZER, b. about 1671/2; d. 19 Mar. 1755, "in his 83rd year;" m. HANNAH STURTEVANT, b. about 1678/9; d. 23 Jan. 1759, "in her 80th year." (Old Cemetery Records at Plympton, in The Mayflower Descendant, vol. 11, p. 163.)

viii. DAVID, killed by a falling tree in 1689 (The Standishes of America, p. 13). Since Alexander Standish had only three children by his second wife and the vital records give their births as stated below, it is probable that David was the youngest child of Alexander Standish by his first wife, and that he was perhaps about twelve years old when he was accidently killed.

IV. JOSIAS[2] STANDISH AND HIS FAMILY

JOSIAS[2] STANDISH, as he was called by his father and in most of the early records, or JOSIAH STANDISH, as his name was written in later life, born probably in 1633, died at Preston, Conn., 19 Mar. 1690 (Genealogical and Biographical Record of New London County, 1905, p. 754). As Josias Standish he married first, 19 Dec. 1654, MARY DINGLEY (Marshfield Vital Records, in The Mayflower Descendant, vol. 2, p. 4), who, as the wife of "Josias Standish of duxberough," died "ye first of July 1655," and was buried at "duxberough" (ib., vol. 2, p. 5, and REGISTER, vol. 8, p. 192); and secondly SARAH ALLEN, who was born 30 Mar. 1639 and survived her husband, daughter of Samuel and Ann Allen of Braintree. (Cf. the REGISTER, vol. 10, p. 225, vol. 19, p. 310, Weaver's History of Windham, Conn., 1864, p. 33, and the Boston Evening Transcript, 4 Nov. 1903, Note 485. The MS. of the late Wesley Weyman, box 4, package 34, asserts that the maiden name of Ann Allen was Whitmore, but gives no authority.)

Josias Standish lived first in Duxbury. He purchased a tract of land in the grant which was made to Duxbury and which was later incorporated as Bridgewater, and he was included in the first group of men who were made freemen there, in May 1657. After a few years he returned to Duxbury. (Mitchell's History of Bridgewater, pp. 27, 28.) On 1 July 1668 he received a permit, with others, from Gov. Thomas Mayhew to trade in land and other property at Martha's Vineyard, and for several years carried on this trade, although he never lived there. (Annals of West Tisbury, p. 11, in Banks's History of Martha's Vineyard, vol. 2.) At one time, in 1661–1663, he also owned land at Mannomet, on the side of the Mannomet River next to Sandwich (The Mayflower Descendant, vol. 18, pp. 87, 88). Several times he bought land in "Duxborrow" (Plymouth Colony Deeds, vol. 3, p. 61, vol. 4, p. 116, etc., quoted in The Mayflower Descendant, vol. 16, pp. 250, 251, vol. 19, p. 97, vol. 25, p. 147). He was in Duxbury as late as 4 Oct. 1686, when he witnessed a deed (Pilgrim Notes and Queries, vol. 5, p. 67).

He was a lieutenant and later a captain of the company for defense at Duxbury. He was also a selectman and a deputy to the General Court of the Plymouth Colony (The Standishes of America, p. 7). He sat in the War Council 7 June 1667 (MS. of the late Wesley Weyman, box 4, package 34).

The first mention of Capt. Josiah Standish in the vicinity of Norwich, Conn., is in a deed of sale, dated 5 Feb. 1687, from "John Parks of the new plantation east of Norwich," which was later incorporated as Preston, to "Capt. Josiah Standish now in Norwich," of 150 acres "over Showtucket River upon the hill between Mr. Fitch's farm and Pocketannuck." The same year he purchased a 1000-acre right in Windham, near the site of the present Willimantic (The Standishes of America, p. 11, and Miss Caulkins's History of Norwich, p. 251). Miss Caulkins shows that the name of the grantor was John Parke, not Parker. On 17 Mar. 1687 "Capt. James Fitch, Capt. Josiah Standish, Thomas Parke Sen., Jonathan Trasy, Thomas Trasy, Joseph Morgan and all the rest of the inhabitants living in New Preson" had their title confirmed by obtaining a deed from the Mohican sachem, Oanaco (History of Norwich, p. 255). In 1689 Capt. Josiah Standish was appointed by the General Court of the Connecticut Colony "to take care of the Trayne Band of Preston," which was instructed to be obedient to him (Colonial Records of Connecticut, vol. 2, p. 252).

The First Congregational Church in Preston was organized in 1698. In the church records, under date of 1 Jan. 1699, appear the names of eleven persons who had already "adjoined the church by the renewal of the covenant." The third name is "Mrs. Standish," and the eleventh name is "Mrs. Standish wife of Josiah Standish" (Preston First Congregational Church Bicentennial Celebration, p. 129, which will be referred to in subsequent paragraphs as Preston Church Statistics). Evidently the first named "Mrs. Standish" was the widow of Capt. Josiah. The second "Mrs. Standish" would be considered without question the wife of his son Josiah, if it were not for the record showing that "Sarah Standish" was admitted to the church in Preston on 28 Sept. 1701 (ib., p. 130). The only Sarah Standish known at this time and place was the wife of Josiah Standish, Jr. Since there is no indication that Josiah, Jr., had a wife before he married Sarah, the most reasonable explanation of these two records is that the name of the widow was by a mistake entered twice in the first record.

Capt. Josiah Standish's widow and his son Miles were the administrators of his estate. The inventory, in the Court Records of New London County (vol. 7, p. 31), is quoted in the MS. of the late Wesley Weyman (box 4, package 34).

Capt. Josiah Standish had no children by his first wife, as will be seen by referring to the date of her death. The MS. of the late Wesley Weyman states that a daughter, Mary, was born in 1660. The naming of the first daughter of the second wife for the first wife frequently happened in olden times. It was a pretty compliment, and quite tactful on the part of the second wife. The marriage dates of the sons show that they were born probably after 1670. Between 1660 and 1670 probably other children were born who died young. In this gap the writer has placed two daughters, Martha and Mehitable (vide infra). As will be proved in the account of the daughter Mercy, there were nine children who grew to maturity. The order of births of the boys is determined by the deed of settlement of their father's estate.

Children by second wife:

i. MARY,[3] b. in 1660; d. 19 June 1736 (Vital Records of Bridgewater, vol. 2, p. 446); m. 4 Jan. 1681 JAMES CARY, b. at Braintree 28 Mar. 1652 (ib., vol. 1, p. 68), d. at Bridgewater 20 Nov. 1706 (ib., vol. 2, p. 445), son of John and Elizabeth (Godfrey) Cary of Bridgewater. This family remained in Bridgewater. The record of marriage of James Cary singularly omits the name of his wife: "The mariage of James Carey Which was Solemnized: the: 4: day January in the yeare of our Lord: 1681." (Bridgewater Vital Records, quoted in The Mayflower Descendant, vol. 2, p. 90.) In "The Cary Family in America" (p. 11), by Henry Grosvenor Cary, it is asserted that James Cary married Mary Shaw in 1682; but that James Cary married Mary Standish is proved by her signature, "Mary Cary," affixed to a deed releasing her right to a share in the estate of her sister, Martha Standish.*

ii. MEHITABLE. No record has been found of her except her name in "The Standishes of America," and yet she must have been living in 1729, as one of the eight heirs of her brother Miles; but, if she disposed of her share of her brother's estate, the deed was overlooked when extracts from the Preston land records were made. She must have died before 1731, because she did not sign the release of her rights in her sister Martha's estate.

iii. MARTHA, admitted to the church 8 July 1705 (Preston Church Statistics, p. 130); d. unm. in 1730, but not before 22 June, when she sold her share of the estate of her brother Miles to her brother Samuel, but she died before the deed was acknowledged. The sale was made legal by her "coheirs" relinquishing their rights, 16 Apr. 1731. Those signing this release were her brother Josiah Standish, her sisters Lois Sprague, Marcy Wheelock, and Mary Cary, Ralph Wheelock, husband of Marcy, four children of her brother Israel Standish, namely, Prudence Sawyer and Amie, Elizabeth, and Miles Standish, and Jacob Sawyer, husband of Prudence. (Preston Land Records, vol. 4, p. 689, quoted in the MS. of the late Wesley Weyman, box 4, package 34.) Since the conveyance was from Martha to Samuel, these signatures account for all the children of Josiah Standish, Sr., except Mehitable, and this document proves that Martha died unm. in 1730. The text of the release follows:

"Know all men by these presents that whereas ye above named Martha Standish hath sold unto ye above named Samuel Standish her Right in ye lands above described and Executed the above written deed by signing & sealing & ye same deceased and hath not acknowledged ye same as her act and deed as ye Law Requires It being honestly & justly bargained and sold. Therefore Know ye that we whose hands & Seals are hereunto Subscribed and annexed being coheirs of ye Estate of ye sd Martha Standish do for ourselves and heirs & Executors Remise Release and forever Quit Claim all our Right Title Property possession Claim or demand whatsoever to ye Lands mentioned in ye abovesaid deed to ye sd Samuel Standish Ratifying and Confirming ye above written deed to Stand Good & Effectual In ye Law for ye hold of ye sd Samuel Standish as it was completely Executed by her In her lifetime as also any other Right title or interest that we have thereto as coheirs to ye land. In witness whereof we have hereunto set our hands & seals this 16th day of April, 1731." Josiah, Lois, Mercy, and Ralph Wheelock acknowledged the deed.

iv. MYLES (or MILES), d. s.p. in 1728 (Caulkins's History of Norwich, p. 251); m. (1) 5 Dec. 1700 MEHITABEL (CARY) ADAMS of

*Is it not possible that James Cary married (1) Mary Shaw and (2) Mary Standish? In an article entitled "Marriages in the Town of Bridgewater previous to Its Division," which was published in the REGISTER of July 1867 (vol. 21, pp. 225–228), the fourth entry (on p. 225) reads as follows: "James Cary and Mary Shaw, Jan. 4, 1681" [1681/2]. This entry is accepted in the printed "Vital Records of Bridgewater," vol. 2, pp. 75, 336, as supplying the name of James Cary's wife. In the same article, the third entry from the end reads: "James Cary and Mary [sic, Sarah] Shaw, Feb. 8, 1722" [1722/3]. This James Cary is, of course, of a later generation.—EDITORS.

(1) 18 Dec. 1689 Elisha Adams, b. 25 Aug. 1666, son of Ensign Edward and Lydia (Rockwood) Adams of Medfield (The Standishes of America, p. 7, in which only this marriage, which is called his second marriage, is given; MS. of the late Wesley Weyman, box 4, package 38); m. (2) ELIZABETH ———, who survived him, was administratrix of his estate, and was authorized by the General Court in May 1728 to sell part of the estate to meet a small total of outstanding debts. (Connecticut Colonial Records, vol. 7, p. 167.)

v. JOSIAH, d. 26 Mar. 1753 (MS. of the late Wesley Weyman, box 4, package 34); m. SARAH ——— (DOTY, according to the Weyman MS.), who d. 16 Jan. or 16 June 1741 (ib.). They had several children bapt. at Preston (Preston Church Statistics). The family moved to Stafford, Conn., in 1719 (Caulkins's History of Norwich, p. 251). He was one of the twelve first settlers of Stafford (History of Tolland County, by J. R. Cole, p. 485). On 15 Apr. 1729 "Josiah Standish of Stafford" sold all his rights in the "real estate that my brother Myles Standish late of Preston Dyes Seized of" (Preston Land Records, vol. 4, p. 475, quoted in the Wesley Weyman MS., box 4, package 34).

vi. SAMUEL, b. at Duxbury about 1680; m. (2) 15 Jan. 1745 MRS. HANNAH PARKE, who d. 25 Nov. 1757. (The Standishes of America, pp. 11, 13).

He moved to Preston with his father; and he and his first wife were church members at Preston, where their children were baptized (Preston Church Statistics, p. 141). He was licensed to tan leather there in 1706 (Caulkins's History of Norwich, p. 251). He was the only one of the surname listed as a church member in Preston in 1744 (Preston Church Statistics, p. 152). This shows that his first wife was then dead and that his brothers and sisters had either died or moved away. His farm was located both in Norwich and in Preston. The four brothers, Miles, Josiah, Samuel, and Israel Standish, "being proper heirs of ye land of our Honored father Josiah Standish of Preston, late deceased, we the four brothers owners of lands lying partly in Preston and Partly in Norwich as may appear by a deed from Capt. John Parke and by a town grant in the division of the commons," agree among themselves by deed that a part of the lands of Miles, Josiah, and Israel be conveyed to Samuel, 2 May 1715. (Preston Land Records, vol. 3, p. 48, quoted in the Wesley Weyman MS., box 4, package 34.)

vii. ISRAEL, d. before January 1730, when his children were called heirs of their uncle Miles (Preston Land Records, vol. 4, p. 657, quoted in the Wesley Weyman MS., box 4, package 34); m. 8 Feb. 1704 ELIZABETH RICHARDS, daughter of William and Mary (? Williams) Richards. They were church members, and their children were baptized at Preston (Preston Church Statistics, p. 130, etc.).

viii. LOIS, m. (1) 29 Nov. 1706, as his second wife, HUGH CALKINS, b. in June 1659, d. 15 Sept. 1722, "in his 63rd[sic] yr," son of John and Sarah (Royce) Calkins, who came with their older children from New London to Norwich. (Norwich Vital Records, pp. 19, 43, 172, Caulkins's History of Norwich, p. 172, and deductions from these data.) He had m. (1) in May 1689 Sarah Sluman, who d. 5 Apr. 1703, daughter of Thomas and Sarah (Bliss) Sluman (or Slonman). (Norwich Vital Records, pp. 13, 43, etc., Caulkins's History of Norwich.) Lois did not marry an Abell, as the late Wesley Weyman thought possible, but Hugh Calkins, son of Hugh and Sarah (Sluman) Calkins, married 9 Nov. 1714 Phebe Abell. (Norwich Vital Records, p. 77.) Lois (Standish) Calkins m. (2) 21 Mar. 1727, as his second wife, LIEUT. JOHN SPRAGUE, who d. 6 Mar. 1728, son of John and Ruth (Bassett) Sprague. His first wife, Lydia, d. 18 July 1725. The identity of Lois as the widow of John Sprague is established by the following deed, dated 26 Jan. 1729 and signed by Lowis Sprague, Miles Standish, Elizabeth Standish, and Amie Standish, the last three being children of Israel Standish: "The subscribers heirs in part to the estate of our brother Miles Standish late of Preston deceased and ye other as Resedary part being nephews to our Honored Uncle Miles Standish" sell to Jabez Carey their rights in the real estate left by said Miles. (Preston Land Records, vol. 4, p. 657, quoted in the Wesley Weyman MS., box 4, package 34.) Jabez Carey purchased the rights of other heirs later (ib., vol. 4, pp. 335, 913, etc.).

ix. MERCY. admitted to the church in Preston 30 May 1718 (Preston Church Statistics, p. 131); m. 30 Sept. 1726, as his second wife, RALPH WHEELOCK, b. in 1683, d. 15 Oct. 1748, son of Eleazer and Elizabeth (Fuller) Wheelock. He had m. (1) 8 Jan. 1708 Ruth Huntington, daughter of Christopher Huntington. (Old Houses of the Ancient Town of Norwich, p. 489, Perkins's Old Families of Norwich, p. 34, the Wesley Weyman MS., box 4, package 38.) The date of Ralph Wheelock's second marriage and the date of the birth of his daughter, Mary Wheelock, 28 Nov. 1728, prove that she was a daughter of Ralph Wheelock and his second wife, Mercy Standish, and correct a note in regard to the ancestry of the Kirkland family (see the REGISTER, vol. 14, p. 376).

The following transactions are of great importance in this family history: On 15 Apr. 1729 Josiah Standish of Stafford sold to Ralph Wheelock [his brother-in-law] and Jabez Cary, both of Windham, "all right to the real estate that my brother Miles Standish late of Preston Dyed Seized of." On 26 Mar. 1730 Ralph and Mercy Wheelock of Windham sold to Jabez Cary "our eight part and our one sixteenth part of lands in Norwich and Preston that did formerly belong to Miles Standish late of Preston." (Land Records of Preston, vol. 4, pp. 475, 655, quoted in the Wesley Weyman MS., box 4, package 34.) These two deeds show that Josiah Standish sold all of his share of his brother's estate, which was an eighth part, to Ralph Wheelock and Jabez Cary. Consequently what Ralph Wheelock received was half of the eighth or one sixteenth. This part, with his wife's share, which was also one eighth, constitute the two fractional parts covered by the second deed. This proves that the Mercy who married Ralph Wheelock was a daughter of Josiah Standish, Sr., that, when the son Miles died, his widow survived him but a few months, and that Miles's estate was divided among eight heirs, who were his brothers and sisters.

Further Research on Deborah Sampson

Deborah Sampson

Frontispiece of The Female Review: Life of Deborah Sampson, the Female Soldier in the War of Revolution.

Deborah Sampson Gannett (December 17, 1760 – April 29, 1827), better known as Deborah Samson or Deborah Sampson, was a Massachusetts woman who disguised herself as a man in order to serve in the Continental Army during the American Revolutionary War.[1] She is one of a small number of women with a documented record of military combat experience in that war.[2] She served 17 months in the army under the name "Robert Shirtliff" (also spelled in various sources as Shirtliffe and Shurtleff)[3][4] of Uxbridge, Massachusetts, was wounded in 1782, and was honorably discharged at West Point, New York in 1783.

Early life

Deborah Sampson was born on December 17, 1760, in Plympton, Massachusetts, into a family of modest means.[5] Her father's name was Jonathan Sampson (or Samson) and her mother's name was Deborah Bradford.[5] Her siblings were Jonathan (born 1753), Elisha (born 1755), Hannah (born 1756), Ephraim (born 1759), Nehemiah (born 1764), and Sylvia (born 1766).[5] Deborah's mother was the great-granddaughter of William Bradford, Governor of Plymouth Colony.[6] Some of Deborah's ancestors included passengers on the Mayflower.[7]

Deborah was told that her father had most likely disappeared at sea, but evidence suggests that he actually abandoned the family and migrated to Lincoln County, Maine.[5] He took a common-law wife named Martha, had two or more children with her, and returned to Plympton in 1794 to attend to a property transaction.[5] In 1770 someone called Jonathan Sampson was indicted for murder in Maine;[5] It is uncertain whether this individual was Deborah's father because there are no existing records containing biographical details about the defendant in the case.[5]

When Deborah's father abandoned the family, her mother was unable to provide for her children, so she placed them in the households of friends and relatives, a common practice in 18th-century New England.[5] Deborah was placed in the home of a maternal relative.[5] When her mother died shortly afterwards, she was sent to live with Reverend Peter Thatcher's widow Mary Prince Thatcher (1688-1771), who was then in her eighties.[5] Historians believe she learned to read while living with the widow Thatcher, who might have wanted Deborah to read Bible verses to her.[5]

Upon the widow's death, Deborah was sent to live with the Jeremiah Thomas family in Middleborough, where she worked as an indentured servant from 1770 to 1778.[5] Although treated well, she was not sent to school like the Thomas children because Thomas was not a believer in the education of women.[5] Sampson was able to overcome Thomas's opposition by learning from Thomas's sons, who shared their school work with her.[5] This method was apparently successful; when her time as an indentured servant was over at age 18, Deborah made a living by teaching school during the summer sessions in 1779 and 1780.[5] She worked as a weaver in the winter; Sampson was highly skilled and worked for the Sproat Tavern as well as the Bourne, Morton, and Leonard families.[5] During her time teaching and weaving she boarded with the families that employed her.[5]

Sampson was also reported to have woodworking and mechanical aptitude.[5] Her skills included basket weaving, and light carpentry such as producing milking stools and winter sleds.[5] She was also experienced with fashioning wooden tools and implements including weather vanes, spools for thread, and quills for weaving.[5] She also produced pie crimpers, which she sold door to door.[5]

Physical description

Sampson was approximately 5 feet 9 inches tall,[5] compared to the average woman of her day, who was around 5 feet,[5] and the average man, who was 5 feet 6 inches[8] to 5 feet 8 inches tall.[9] Her biographer, Hermann Mann, who knew her personally for many years, implied that she was not thin, writing in 1797 that "her waist might displease a coquette".[10] He also reported that her breasts were very small, and that she bound them with a linen cloth to hide them during her years in uniform. Mann wrote that "the features of her face are regular; but not what a physiognomist would term the most beautiful".[10]

A neighbor who as a boy knew Deborah as an elderly woman remarked that she was "a person of plain features".[10] A descendant named Pauline Hildreth Monk Wise (1914–1994[6]) was believed by relatives to have strongly resembled Deborah, based on comparison of Pauline's physical appearance to a 1797 portrait of Deborah, contemporary descriptions of Deborah's features and height, and Pauline's height, which at 6 feet was taller than most men.[5][6] Sampson's appearance—tall, broad, strong, and not delicately feminine—contributed to her success at pretending to be a man.[5]

Army service

In early 1782, Sampson wore men's clothes and joined an Army unit in Middleborough, Massachusetts, under the name Timothy Thayer.[11] She collected a bonus and then failed to meet up with her company as scheduled. Inquiries by the company commander revealed that Sampson had been recognized by a local resident at the time she signed her enlistment papers. Her deception uncovered, she repaid the portion of the bonus that she had not spent, but she was not subjected to further punishment by the Army.[12] The Baptist church to which she belonged learned of her actions and withdrew its fellowship, meaning that its members refused to associate with her unless she apologized and asked forgiveness.[13]

In May 1782, Sampson enlisted again in Uxbridge, Massachusetts under the name "Robert Shirtliff" (also spelled in some sources as "Shirtliffe" or "Shurtleff", and joined the Light Infantry Company of the 4th Massachusetts Regiment,[14] under the command of Captain George Webb (1740–1825). This unit, consisting of 50 to 60 men, was first quartered in Bellingham, Massachusetts, and later mustered at Worcester with the rest of the regiment commanded by Colonel William Shepard. Light Infantry Companies were elite troops, specially picked because they were taller and stronger than average.[15] Their job was to provide rapid flank coverage for advancing regiments, as well as rearguard and forward reconnaissance duties for units on the move.[16] Because she joined an elite unit, Sampson's disguise was more likely to succeed, since no one was likely to look for a woman among soldiers who were specially chosen for their above average size and superior physical ability.[5]

Sampson fought in several skirmishes. During her first battle, on July 3, 1782, outside Tarrytown, New York, she took two musket balls in her thigh and a cut on her forehead. She begged her fellow soldiers to let her die and not take her to a doctor, but a soldier put her on his horse and took her to a hospital. The doctors treated her head wound, but she left the hospital before they could attend to her leg. Fearful that her identity would be discovered, she removed one of the balls herself with a penknife and sewing needle, but the other one was too deep for her to reach. Her leg never fully healed. On April 1, 1783, she was reassigned to new duties, and spent seven months serving as a waiter to General John Paterson.

The war was thought to be over following the Battle of Yorktown, but since there was no official peace treaty, the Continental Army remained in uniform. On June 24, the President of Congress ordered George Washington to send a contingent of soldiers under Paterson to Philadelphia to help quell a rebellion of American soldiers who were protesting delays in receiving their pay and discharges. During the summer of 1783, Sampson became ill in Philadelphia and was cared for by Doctor Barnabas Binney (1751–1787). He removed her clothes to treat her and discovered the cloth she used to bind her breasts. Without revealing his discovery to army authorities, he took her to his house, where his wife, daughters, and a nurse took care of her.

In September 1783, following the signing of the Treaty of Paris, November 3 was set as the date for soldiers to muster out. When Dr. Binney asked Deborah to deliver a note to General Paterson, she correctly assumed that it would reveal her gender. In other cases, women who pretended to be men to serve in the army were reprimanded, but Paterson gave her an honorable discharge, a note with some words of advice, and enough money to travel home. She was discharged at West Point, New York, on October 25, 1783, after a year and a half of service.[4]

An Official Record of Deborah Gannet's service as "Robert Shirtliff" from May 20, 1782 to Oct 25, 1783 appears in the "Massachusetts Soldiers and Sailors of the Revolutionary War" series.[17]

Marriage

Statue of Sampson at Sharon, Massachusetts, public library

Deborah Sampson was married in Stoughton, Massachusetts, to Benjamin Gannett (1757–1827), a farmer from Sharon, Massachusetts, on April 7, 1785. They had three children: Earl (1786), Mary (1788), and Patience (1790). They also adopted Susanna Baker Shepard, an orphan. They farmed on land that had been in Gannett's family for generations; their farm was smaller than average, and the land was not productive because it had been worked extensively. These factors, coupled with the depression in the post-war economy, left the family on the edge of poverty.[5]

Final years and death

In January 1792, Sampson petitioned the Massachusetts State Legislature for pay which the army had withheld from her because she was a woman. The legislature granted her petition and Governor John Hancock signed it. The legislature awarded her 34 pounds plus interest back to her discharge in 1783.[18]

In 1802, Sampson began giving lectures about her wartime service. She began by extolling the virtues of traditional gender roles for women, but toward the end of her presentation she left the stage, returned dressed in her army uniform, and then performed a complicated and physically taxing military drill and ceremony routine.[4] She performed both to earn money and to justify her enlistment, but even with these speaking engagements, she was not making enough money to pay her expenses. She frequently had to borrow money from her family and from her friend Paul Revere. Revere also wrote letters to government officials on her behalf, requesting that she be awarded a pension for her military service and her wounds.

In 1804, Revere wrote to U.S. Representative William Eustis of Massachusetts on Sampson's behalf. A military pension had never been requested for a woman. Revere wrote: "I have been induced to enquire her situation, and character, since she quit the male habit, and soldiers uniform; for the more decent apparel of her own gender...humanity and justice obliges me to say, that every person with whom I have conversed about her, and it is not a few, speak of her as a woman with handsome talents, good morals, a dutiful wife, and an affectionate parent".[19] On March 11, 1805, Congress approved the request and placed Sampson on the Massachusetts Invalid Pension Roll at the rate of four dollars a month.

On February 22, 1806, Sampson wrote once more to Revere requesting a loan of ten dollars: "My own indisposition and that of my sons causes me again to solicit your goodness in our favor though I, with Gratitude, confess it rouses every tender feeling and I blush at the thought of receiving ninety and nine good turns as it were—my circumstances require that I should ask the hundredth." He sent the ten dollars.

In 1809, she sent another petition to Congress, asking that her pension as an invalid soldier be modified to start from her discharge in 1783. Had her petition been approved, she would have been awarded back pay of $960—approximately $13,800 in 2016 ($48 a year for 20 years). Her petition was denied, but when it came before Congress again in 1816 an award of $76.80 a year (about $1,100 in 2016 dollars) was approved. With this amount, she was able to repay all her loans and make improvements to the family farm.

Sampson died of yellow fever at the age of 66 on April 29, 1827,[20] and was buried at Rock Ridge Cemetery in Sharon, Massachusetts.[21]

Memorials

Sharon, Massachusetts now memorializes Sampson with a statue in front of the public library, the Deborah Sampson Park, and the "Deborah Sampson Gannett" House, which is privately owned and not open to the public. The farmland around the home is protected to ensure no development occurs on the historic homestead.

In 1906, the town of Plympton, Massachusetts with the Deborah Sampson Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution, placed a boulder on the town green, with a bronze plaque inscribed to Sampson's memory.[22]

During World War II the Liberty Ship S.S. Deborah Gannett (2620) was named in her honor. It was laid down March 10, 1944, launched April 10, 1944 and scrapped in 1962.[23]

As of 2001, the town flag of Plympton incorporates Sampson as the Official Heroine of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Portrayals in art, entertainment, and media

Portrait of Deborah: A Drama in Three Acts (1959) is a play by Charles Emery that made its debut at the Camden Hills Theatre, Camden, Maine, on February 19, 1959.[24]

I'm Deborah Sampson: A Soldier of the Revolution by Patricia Clapp (1977) is a fictional account of her early life and experience in the Revolutionary War.

Sampson is portrayed by Whoopi Goldberg in episode 34 of Liberty's Kids entitled "Deborah Sampson: Soldier of the Revolution."

Alex Myers, a descendant of Sampson's, published Revolutionary (2014), a fictionalized account of her life.[25]

On July 7, 2016, historian/journalist Allison L. Cowan presented "Deborah Sampson: Continental Army soldier", a biographical talk for that week's First Thursdays at Saint Paul's Church National Historic Site.[26]

In her speech at the Democratic National Convention on July 26, 2016, Meryl Streep named Sampson in a list of women who had made history.[27]

Deborah Sampson's story, as narrated by Paget Brewster, was re-enacted in the Season 5 premiere of Drunk History. Evan Rachel Wood portrayed Sampson.[28]
